From the Editors

THE LAST VISIT to Poplar at the end of a run of Call the Midwife is always a sad one. Heidi Thomas's series following the trials and tribulations of a group of healthcare professionals working in London's East End in the late 1960s is so much more than a Sunday-night costume drama. It never fails to highlight stories that, although rooted in the past, remain relevant in 2023.

This time round, however, as well as sadness we're guaranteed a happy conclusion to the series with the long-awaited wedding of Trixie and Matthew. On page 14 we talk to actors Helen George and Ollie Rix about their big day.

On the subject of series ending, we also talk to Shaun Evans, Roger Allam and writer Russell Lewis about the final three episodes of Endeavour, which begin on Sunday. We were saddened but not surprised when it was announced that these would be the last episodes - Inspector Morse and its spin-off Lewis each ran for 33 episodes, so the fact that the last Endeavour in two weeks' time will be episode number 36 means that the prequel has outlasted all that came before it. We will miss Endeavour greatly, as it truly is the end of an era. The dreaming spires of Oxford will never feel quite the same again.

From endings to beginnings now. We're proud to announce that the second series of our popular Radio Times Podcast will be available from Tuesday 21 February. In the first episode Kelly-Anne Taylor talks to Dame Emma Thompson about her viewing habits, the TV programmes, films and friends that influenced her and helped her become one of the greatest actors of her generation - and why an episode of Z Cars traumatised her at an early age.

You can read a taster of what is a cracking interview on our View from my Sofa page and then download the full version from wherever you get your podcasts, or scan the QR code printed on this page and on page 146.

FROM THE ARCHIVE

WHOZAT, DOCTOR?

September 2023 marks Radio Times's 100th birthday – and in preparation for that milestone, we've been delving into our archive, unearthing a trove of unseen images. A prime example? These exclusive never-before-published photos of Doctor Who's Peter Davison in 1981, before his first episode aired the following year. Back then, he was the fresh-faced 30-year-old fifth Doctor – and now, he's a beloved part of the show's own long history.

"This year is the 60th anniversary [of Doctor Who] so that's very exciting," Davison, 71, tells RT. "Now the people who grew up watching the programme when I did it are making the show, and presumably the same thing will happen in the future. The lunatics are running the asylum!"

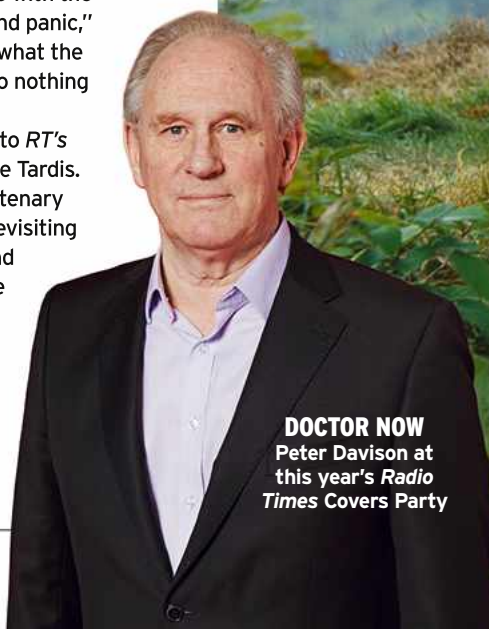

Davison's Doctor made a surprise return in Jodie Whittaker's swansong last year.

"Although the programme looks much better with all the special effects on the screen, it's still made with the same degree of chaos and panic," he says, "Nobody knew what the heck they were doing. So nothing really ever changes!"

And our time travel into RT's past doesn't end with the Tardis. As we approach our centenary later this year, we'll be revisiting further old favourites and little-seen corners of the magazine's archive.

GRAPEVINE

The TV stories that are getting us talking...

RIPLEY, BELIEVE IT OR NOT

Sherlock's Moriarty, Andrew Scott, is ticking off another charismatic villain role – Patricia Highsmith's anti-hero Tom Ripley. Titled simply Ripley, the series has been in development at US network Showtime for some years, but now looks set for Netflix.

Co-starring Johnny Flynn and Dakota Fanning and with a sunny Italian backdrop, this could be a White Lotus-sized treat.

DEATH AND AXES

WandaVision actor Elizabeth Olsen stars as a Texan housewife accused of murdering her friend with an axe in Love & Death, a true-crime drama coming to ITVX this autumn. Airing on HBO Max this spring, it has a strong pedigree – it's from the pen of Big Little Lies writer David E Kelley and Nicole Kidman is among its producers.

A CUNNING PLAN...

Blackadder returns – and it's all thanks to RT! Last week listeners to Zoe Ball's Radio 2 show heard that Richard Curtis is to revive his classic comedy for one night only and that Tony Robinson is to play Baldrick, Blackadder's dim-witted sidekick, in a skit for Comic Relief. Curtis bumped into Robinson at last month's Radio Times Covers Party and the pair immediately hatched a cunning plan. The next day Curtis texted a script to his old friend, that Robinson describes as "beautifully crafted".

NEVER AGAIN

Work began on the upcoming BBC drama series Grenfell soon after the tower-block fire broke out in 2017, writer/director Peter Kosminsky (Wolf Hall) has revealed. The three-partner draws on five years of inquiry hearings and interviews with those affected by the tragedy. The writer promises to dig into "the heart of the catastrophe". ROBIN PARKER

TEN QUESTIONS WITH

SANJEEV BHASKAR & SINEAD KEENAN

Unforgotten's new team on killing Cassie, random emojis and playing coppers

The fifth season of Unforgotten is the first without Nicola Walker as DCI Cassie Stuart. Sinéad Keenan has big shoes to fill as new arrival DCI Jessica James...

Sanjeev, were you responsible, along with Nicola and show creator Chris Lang, for killing Cassie at the end of season four?

SANJEEV I was not. People say they were shocked; I was shocked four times: when I was told, when I read it, when we shot the scenes and when I watched it. Nicola and Cassie are both iconic, but I was still surprised by the outpouring of grief. A few people messaged me on social media saying they would never watch Unforgotten again... "Why couldn't Cassie retire [rather than being killed in a car crash]?" Because, I said, life is not like that. Nicola and I still chat every few weeks or send texts. We have this weird thing of sending random emojis. The more ridiculous, the better.

Sinéad, how did you feel about replacing such a character who was so popular?

SINEAD I watched season four with everyone else. When my agent asked if I'd consider reading the

'I said to my agent, "Don't be ridiculous. Only a fool would follow Nicola!"'

SINEAD KEENAN

NEWLY PAIRED
Sinéad Keenan as DCI Jessica "Jessie" James and Sanjeev Bhaskar as DI Sunil "Sunny" Khan script for season five, I said, "No, don't be ridiculous! Only a fool would follow Nicola Walker!" But I was curious, so I read it and the rest is history.

Had your paths crossed before Unforgotten?

SINEAD Very briefly, but our characters barely met. Sanjeev sent me a lovely message saying, "Look, it might be daunting, do you want to Zoom before you meet the team?" I was so nervous that I couldn't stop talking.

Sanjeev, were you able to offer any help?

SANJEEV I was aware that Sinéad was going through what her character, DCI Jessica "Jessie" James, was going through – turning up to work with a team of people who already know each other really well. I've been very lucky to mostly work on happy sets – part of which is down to the presence of strong women, from Meera [Syal, Bhaskar's wife] to Nicola to Sinéad.

ABSENT FRIEND
Nicola Walker as DCI Cassandra "Cassie" Stuart

This season is, among other things, a meditation on grief.

SANJEEV It was really weird when Sunny goes back to Cassie's grave in the first episode. It was hard enough the first time.

And Jessie comes with her own problems...

SINEAD Sunny and his team are making their own painful adjustments to life without Cassie. Then Jessie turns up and you can see them thinking, "Why aren't you Cassie?" Plus Jessie's world implodes minutes before she starts her new job; she intends to make a good impression, but she's not on point and makes a funny remark that comes out wrong. Let's just say Jessie doesn't make it easy for herself.

Does playing a cop in 2023 present its challenges?

SANJEEV When I got sent the first few episodes of season one, I didn't think I'd be cast. Who was going to cast me as a detective? Mainly because I'd never seen anyone who looks like me playing a detective. And I'm about to play another TV cop, Inspector Singh [for a BritBox series], adapted from Shamini Flint's books. In terms of the real police, I've met perfectly nice, reasonable police officers who are aghast at the terrible things that happen within their institution.

How do you research playing a police detective?

SINEAD I watched a few episodes of 24 Hours in Police Custody ahead of playing a detective inspector in [BBC1's] Showtrial. Oh my God, really grim. Why would you want to be a cop? Fair play, we need them, but it wouldn't be for me. This is completely off topic, but when I was doing Little Boy Blue for ITV, I met Detective Superintendent David Kelly [played by Stephen Graham] a few times. He was the first policeman on the scene of Jamie Bulger's murder. That's going to leave a mark on someone. No thanks. I'll just pretend.

Will you be watching Unforgotten go out live?

SANJEEV I don't like watching myself. The beauty of stage is that you don't have to see yourself doing it. It's really hard to be objective about something you're in. But what does set Unforgotten

'I'd never seen anyone like me playing a detective'

SANJEEV BHASKAR

apart from other cop shows I've seen, apart from Chris Lang's writing, is the fact that the cops are unassuming. They don't see themselves as heroic or tragic. I've had messages from detectives saying, "This is how it should be done. We would have you on our team."

SINEAD I'm looking forward to watching Sanjeev. He is so good in it. He won't hear of it, but he's so contained and compelling. The last scene of the first episode, where he goes into the bathroom and kicks the door down, is incredible. Again, it's all about grief.

What other police dramas do you enjoy?

SANJEEV Like everyone else, I love Happy Valley. Sarah Lancashire and I were both in the film Yesterday. There's a picture of us together that I posted on Instagram with the caption "Happy Unforgotten Valley".

SINEAD I haven't even watched all of this season of Unforgotten yet! AMY RAPHAEL

WHAT IT'S LIKE...

to risk your life as an investigative journalist

Mariana van Zeller on being threatened with boiling oil and visiting an opioid lab

9/11 GAVE ME MY BIG BREAK I've wanted to be a journalist since I was 12 years old. I grew up in Portugal, but studied journalism in New York. On the morning of 9/11, I got a call from a former boss in Portugal saying that something horrible had happened and he wanted me to go downtown. I had never done a live report in my life, but when millions of Portuguese people tuned in, I was the first face they saw.

I WORK ALONE There's a lot of training and planning before we even set foot in the field. We're constantly assessing risk. Sometimes National Geographic asks us to take security. I prefer not to – we're meeting dangerous groups and asking them to trust us. If we show up with armed security, that's counterproductive.

CRIMINALS WANT TO BE LOVED The question I always get asked is, "Why do these criminals talk so openly to you?" They want to show off, but more importantly, they want to be understood. They know they're considered the bad guys, and I approach them with empathy first and judgement last.

I'VE FEARED FOR MY LIFE For the new series of Trafficked,

I travelled to Nigeria to report on black market oil. An angry man threatened to throw boiling oil over my cameraman. There are lots of moments where we need to reassess the danger.

MY HUSBAND UNDERSTANDS

He's an investigative journalist, too, so he's used to the work I do. I was doing a report a few years ago where I got access to visit a fentanyl [opioid] lab in Sinaloa, Mexico, and the cartel were going to pick me up in the middle of the night, put a mask on me and take me to an undisclosed location. When I was telling my husband, I thought he was going to talk me out of it. Instead, he said, "Make sure they film you being masked!"

THERE ARE STILL GOOD PEOPLE I am an optimist. This show has actually given me a more positive view of the world, because I have found that no matter how far you travel into the edges of our society, you can still find people that are relatable and redeemable – and I think that's powerful. STEPHEN KELLY

GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY FOR RAIL

Build HS2 and transform Britain, says railway historian Tim Dunn

IF IT ISN'T FARE RISES, it's strikes; and if overhead wires aren't down then it's a lack of trains or a lack of drivers. Really, it makes me fed up.

Fed up not because of these issues – which are very real for many – but fed up because as soon as one problem with our railway is out of the news cycle, another is neatly slipped in, the latest being more doubts about HS2 reaching central London. Dead on time, these stories arrive – unlike all our trains, if the breakfast news is to be believed. But there's another side to our railway. And it's a good one.

The “golden age of rail” is, as many “golden ages” are, a bit of a hindsight myth that exists somewhere between a Ladybird book and The Railway Children and contains an era that stretches from Stephenson's Rocket to the Flying Scotsman and maybe extends on a good day to the InterCity 125, if we sidestep Dr Beeching and his 1960s cuts, somewhere towards the end. But there is another, real, golden age of rail that is showing itself to be rather closer to today.

In 2016, UK rail was carrying twice as many passengers as in 1980. Britain was turning to its railway like never before: relying on it for work, leisure – and freight, too.

Covid knocked all that on the head. Briefly. But the tailwinds were already there. Our ancient railway was already starting to change; getting itself ready for the next challenge: how to keep the country connected sustainably and safely. A raft of major projects are happening that will help the railway serve us – the people – better. From HS2 (which is all about capacity, really – not speed: the slower lines will get much better services as a result) to the Elizabeth Line and the Great North Rail Project, from the Waverley Route and Okehampton reinstatements to rebuilding old bottlenecks at Huddersfield and London Bridge, or even building in clever resilience at Dawlish Sea Wall or in old tunnels – there is brilliant, clever stuff being done behind the scenes by an industry of world-leading professionals.

‘In 2016, UK rail carried twice as many people as in 1980... Covid knocked it on the head. Briefly’

I am a card-carrying, bona-fide fully-paid-up railway enthusiast. Since childhood I've told every person who will listen that our railway is an incredible, brilliant net made from twin strips of steel that bind our country together, that's changed our lives forever, has the potential to change our future and of course is full of endlessly fascinating things and facts.

POSITIVE TRACK
London's Elizabeth Line at Moorgate and, inset, the Flying Scotsman

THIS WEEK

So the incessant drone of negativity about an incredible, beautiful, wondrous thing (which incidentally is 20,000 miles long, has the best part of 3,000 places we can join or exit it and has evolved for 200 years) gets to me. What about the beauty, the design, the human stories, the wit, the joy, the love and care – that can be found on our railway of today and of in the past? Yes, there are the problems that the news reminds us of, but our railway is still a wonderful thing to be cherished and loved, just as it was in its golden age.

THOSE WORLD-LEADING RAILWAY professionals are transforming a Victorian network – while keeping the bits from the past that they can, I hope – into something that's fit for purpose at the 200th anniversary of the railway in 2025, and decades beyond. We just have to hope that our politicians can see what we can see – that pulling the electrified trans-Pennine route via Bradford and cutting out HS2's leg to Leeds – is small-minded, short-term thinking. But if they lend their help – and with a team of hundreds of thousands who know that rails get Britain moving – we're getting set for a new golden age of rail.

Beatlemania was captured in all its ear-shattering frenzy by The Beatles at Shea Stadium on 1 March 1966. “As soon as the Beatles appear on any stage, their fans start screaming – and continue to scream until they leave,” wrote Tom Sloan, BBC head of light entertainment, by way of a taster. “The noise is absolutely deafening and hardly a note of the music or a word of the lyrics can be heard.”

The 50-minute film showed the Fab Four playing to 55,600 people in New York the previous August, and also featured Brenda Holloway, Sounds Incorporated and King Curtis.

Sloan added, “You will see scenes of unrestrained joy and agony which have no parallel in the entertainment business.”

WE'RE LAZY AND ILL-INFORMED

Chris Packham teaches us important lessons about autism

WE'RE ALL ON the spectrum somewhere, aren't we? I know I am!" How many of us have said things like this – maybe as a throwaway reference to our fondness for a particular high street coffee?

Autism isn't widely understood, and too many of us feel we can hop on the bandwagon in a bid to seem more interesting. It's lazy and ill-informed, and it's why a programme like Inside Our Autistic Minds with Chris Packham (BBC iPlayer) is so important. Packham wrote recently in RT about the impact of his autism on his adolescence, and the coping techniques he developed to get by. But he's a hugely successful and skilful TV presenter, of course, so not a "typical" autistic person. But as he tells us, there's a saying: "If you've met one autistic person, you've met one autistic person".

In two documentaries, Packham spends time with four young autistic people – Flo and Murray in the first, Anton and Ethan in the second. And he's right, they don't have a lot in common. Except that they all want to be heard.

The idea is that Packham will help them make a short film to take the rest of us into their worlds. Flo is an improvisational comedian – we see her performing in a pub and getting laughs. Not that Packham is entirely happy in that environment as he dislikes busy, noisy places. Like many autistic women and girls, Flo has become an expert at "masking", presenting a conventional front to the outside world – even to her own mother – but at some cost to her true self. Off stage, a trip to Sainsbury's when she's prepared for Tesco can really throw her. Her husband is patient, but often baffled.

Packham seems to be a "truer" version of himself here than usual. Asked how he is, for

GENTLE RAPPORT
Chris Packham with Murray Bruce

'Chris Packham seems to be a "truer" version of himself here'

example, he says, tentatively, that he's "OK..." rather than offering up the anodyne, unthinking, TV-friendly, "Great, thanks!" Perhaps he's more at ease when he's with other autistic people. Perhaps he's been masking, too.

Murray is the son of broadcaster Ken Bruce and his wife, Kerith. He is 20 and has never spoken, communicating via a tablet. The irony that the child of a silver-tongued DJ has never uttered a word is obvious – and something Packham confronts, bluntly, almost immediately. Bruce is as equable as ever: "Yes, it is ironic. A cruel irony". But it turns out Murray has plenty to say. What he taps out so painstakingly is often poetic – his observation, for example, that "horses breathe understanding into the air". Gradually, Packham and Murray build a gentle rapport. They visit one of Murray's favourite places, a railway museum. Packham takes a beautiful photograph of him. Murray types "I really yearn to speak". The end credits of episode one told us he is now on a college course, and Flo has given birth. I wish them both the very best.

AND SO TO a man with a very loud voice indeed. Jeremy Clarkson is back with a second series of Clarkson's Farm (Amazon Prime). His fans – and he has many – will point out the attention he draws to the challenges of the farming community. His critics – there are a few of those, too – will be immune to his charms. There are predictable swipes at Vauxhall Corsas, snowflakes and ramblers. But, as in the first series, the joke's often on him. "Don't shout at me, I've really tried my hardest," he bleats to his right-hand man, Kaleb. Suddenly, Clarkson's a little boy lost, trapped in a pot-bellied man-bod. You may want to give him a hug. Or you may still find him a tiresome oaf. Either way, he's irritatingly watchable. In spite of the offence he's caused, I can't see him going anywhere. Clarkson makes a lot of money, and not just for himself.

A true love's kiss

As Call the Midwife reaches the end of series 12, Trixie and Matthew finally make it up the aisle. But will married life be for ever?

INTERVIEW BY LAURA CRAIK

WEDDING BELLS

Trixie and Matthew get a magnificent send-off from the Nonnatus House family after their wedding

EVERYONE LOVES A WEDDING. Never more so than when it's that of a much-loved couple whose relationship has been plagued by setbacks. To say the course of true love didn't run smooth for Matthew and Trixie is an understatement. Since becoming an item in series ten, the couple have experienced more than their fair share of heartache.

All of which makes Trixie and Matthew's wedding day a very special one, destined to be a ratings-buster for the popular show – although we're not giving away any spoilers by revealing that there are some major hiccups – this is Call the Midwife, after all.

Speaking to Radio Times over Zoom from their respective homes in London, Helen George and Olly Rix agree that filming their characters' big day was an uplifting experience, but also an arduous one. While weddings look wonderful on screen, they can be notoriously tough and drawn-out to film. "It was a long day," Helen confirms, her own hair much longer, wavier and more brunette than Trixie's. "We did go over our schedule by about an hour and a half. But it was also a beautiful day. There was a real sense of occasion. And it was lovely that all the cast got to be together."

Helen says that the look of the nuptials was inspired by society weddings of the time – after all, Matthew is the son and heir of an aristocrat – and that Trixie's dress referenced a Givenchy campaign starring Audrey Hepburn, a muse to the designer throughout the 1960s. "It was a beautiful photograph of Audrey looking demure and gorgeous with this small pillbox hat on her head, and a long veil. Trixie's version was loosely based around that."

While it would be unfair to call Trixie a bridezilla, her patience is tested when one of her "something old, new, borrowed and blue" accoutrements fails to materialise. Is Trixie's perfectionism something to which Helen can relate? "I think it's natural for any woman to want to get it completely right – it's an important day in anyone's life," she says. "Something did go wrong on the day of filming, too. We'd been given pizzas, because everyone was starving. And poor Meghan [Cusack, who plays Nancy Corrigan] got grease all over her bridesmaid's dress. That was a drama."

As for whether there will be any drama in the happy couple's future, Olly thinks not, and believes theirs is definitely a love match. "It's absolutely that. There's nothing facile or easy about their relationship. They've gone through a lot, especially grief. Trixie helped him learn how to raise a child and Matthew lost his own father just prior to the wedding. That they didn't postpone is testament to how vital it is for them."

Nor does Olly feel that the couple's different backgrounds make for a mismatch. "Matthew uses his money for the correct causes. He's an unusual character in that respect, because he uses his money to champion things that Trixie cares about, so I don't anticipate it being a problem." ▷

◁ With more money at her disposal, is Trixie likely to turn into the Hyacinth Bucket of Nonnatus House? “She’s not a gold digger,” says Helen, almost indignantly. “It’s coincidental that she fell in love with Matthew. It wasn’t for the money. Yes, the Jag is great, but it’s a nightmare to get in and out of!”

While Helen has been in the show since its first episode in 2012, Olly joined in 2020, when Britain was in lockdown, making the tricky issue of being a newbie on a well-established

‘If you see them wearing matching slippers, it’s time to stop’

HELEN GEORGE

show trickier still. “I joined in series ten, and didn’t meet the rest of the cast until series 11, so I did a whole series pretty much with just Helen,” he remembers. “She became a bit of a North Star. It wasn’t easy, but Helen and I really listen to one another, and have done from day one. She also gave me a rundown of the show’s history, because I didn’t sit down to watch ten series’ worth of Call the Midwife.”

“Olly thought I was a nun for the first three years,” laughs Helen.

While not all the female characters are nuns, the show is nevertheless a matriarchy, a quality that Olly values. “I’m very close to my mother and younger sister anyway, but before Midwife, I’d also just finished two years of working on the US drama series The Spanish Princess, which was a reframing of the history of Henry VIII through the eyes of Catherine of Aragon. That was also scripted by female writers, directed by female directors and had a very strong, predominantly female cast.”

That more stories are being told through a female lens requires a particular diligence from male actors, according to Olly. “You have to realise that the camera is not looking at you necessarily in the way you think it is. The eye is female. That’s interesting – for me as well. Because Matthew’s part is written by a woman [Heidi Thomas], I don’t always understand why he’s doing certain things. I often run to Helen and say, ‘Would I say that?’”

There’s no shortage of gritty TV dramas and Olly notes that “basic stories of kindness and human decency” are increasingly few and far between, which is possibly why viewers respond so strongly to Call the Midwife. “People message me a lot, essentially saying they wish they had somebody in their life that looked after them the way that Matthew looks after Trixie. People are really yearning for some sort of protection; somebody to put their arm around them and tell them it’s going to be OK. They need to feel that there is some decency out there.”

IRONICALLY, OLLY ALSO recalls how, when Matthew first got together with Trixie, he’d receive messages from viewers saying that they didn’t trust him. “We’re conditioned to expect the worst. Obviously, I couldn’t give away any of the storyline, but I wanted to reassure people and say, ‘No, it’s not going to be what you think it is. Trixie is actually going to be happy, and Matthew is a decent guy.’”

Having been in Call the Midwife from the beginning (bar a brief hiatus in 2021, when she was on maternity leave with her second child), Helen must look back on young Trixie and feel she’s come a long way. “Definitely. In the early series, Trixie was first brought on as the blonde, bubbly friend of Jenny Lee who liked to drink and smoke and talk about boys. It’s been really nice to peel back those layers and get to know her even more. I’m lucky that Heidi and the writers have invested in me in that way.”

With the ring on her finger, will it soon be time for Trixie to be at the other end of the blanket, with someone else mopping her brow? “Who knows?” laughs Helen. “I’m not going to comment, because it’s out of our hands. As long as there are interesting stories to play, I’m down with that.”

Endeavour Sunday 8.00pm ITV1

INTERVIEW BY CAROLINE FROST

MORSE'S LAST CROSSWORD completed, Thursday's last pint poured, Superintendent Bright's last cigarette smoked, Win's last sandwiches eaten... We must not weep that it has gone, but instead rejoice that it has been.

The ninth and final series of Endeavour is a sweet sorrow, bringing down the curtain on a series that began simply as Inspector Morse's origin story and evolved into something so much more. But while its millions of fans may mourn, it seems the show's two biggest stars are not just philosophical but ready to let go.

"The story is all, and when it's told, it's told," says Shaun Evans of the title role that he has played since 2012. "That time was coming, and you don't want to repeat yourself. You shouldn't stay just because it's comfortable. You owe it to the audience to do it well and then call it a day."

It seems, just as we've watched young Endeavour Morse evolve on screen, Evans has inevitably done the same. "I don't feel like that person any more," he agrees. "I don't think I can honestly keep doing that job because I've changed, I feel different." Is he referring to Morse's work ethic in favour of a personal life? "My hunger remains, wanting to get things done and make work, but that solitude, that difficulty connecting, I've worked through."

For Roger Allam, putting Detective Chief Inspector Fred Thursday's fedora permanently on the hook is all part of the nature of showbusiness, an industry he has hopped around with seemingly effortless panache for four decades.

"I've always been drawn to being able to do strongly contrasting things," he says. "When this was first offered and they wanted a commitment of three years, my heart sank and I nearly didn't do it. Two years seemed doable in my head. Cleverly, the execs just kept renewing it, one year at a time."

Nevertheless, even the poker-faced Allam confesses that, when it came to filming his final scenes, he had a moment. "You're just doing your work, but then it creeps in and the experience of it – 'This is the last time I'll be in Bright's office and that set will be broken up...' – that's very moving."

If last summer's filming in and around Oxford felt particularly poignant, it was something both men dealt with in their own particular ways. Allam found himself at a "sort of wrap party" at a bar in Islington, north London ("one of those places where you have to shout to make yourself heard"), while Evans embarked on a far more Morse-like enterprise.

"I was there [Oxford] until the very last day, and that was on my own. It was perfect in a way because it meant that I had the chance to say goodbye alone. I went to Italy the very next day and enrolled on a language course, because I knew I'd have lots of energy, and I wanted to do something completely different to distract me while I slowly came back down."

— Their last — ENDEAVOUR

Time, too, to reflect on a TV triumph that could have gone so wrong, trying to meet the high standards of drama instilled by the original Morse. Instead, Endeavour came to be as much loved as its predecessor – with writer Russell Lewis mining his knowledge of Colin Dexter's books to paint a picture of 1960s and 70s Oxford through the prism of police work, against a backdrop of real-life events, such as World Cup victory and Apollo landings. But as every fan knows, Endeavour's not really about any of that. Instead, it's about the characters and their rich hinterlands.

ALLAM BELIEVES IT'S the contrasting personal lives of Morse and Thursday that gives the series its unique punch. Sure enough, for years, we've watched Thursday's wife Win handing him his sandwiches (Monday: cheese and pickle, Tuesday: luncheon meat) and telling him: "Come home safe". But while he enjoys simple pleasures, Thursday is no simple man. Inspired by the men he met of his father's generation, Allam carries the inspector's war experience into every scene.

"He wasn't a professional soldier although he had skills, he was very good at fighting." The actor chuckles, remembering one of his favourite lines from early on in the series. "Confronted by a gang of hoodlums, Thursday tells them, 'I didn't tramp halfway round Europe to come back to a country run by spivs and chancers like you.'" >

◁ And then there's Morse, the younger man, standing with one foot in the Thursdays' dining room, palpably hankering after all they have, yet seemingly ready to sacrifice prospects of family and other close relationships in the pursuit of truth and justice. Is Morse our great comfort, the solitary crusader who remains awake and alert so we all may sleep? Evans isn't convinced.

"This desire to sacrifice everything for your work, it's actually masking something else, something more difficult to look at about yourself," he muses. "So you channel all your energy and enthusiasm into being a great detective, when actually the more difficult thing to say is, 'Why haven't I got a relationship?' I think that's all going on with this character, rather than being a completely altruistic character."

BESIDES THE GREAT performances from the two leads and across the board – every fan I know identifies a different moment when they took the initially brusque Chief Superintendent Bright (Anton Lesser) to their heart – it's the elegiac quality of Endeavour that sets it apart. As well as the cars, the suits, the skirts of the period, the mood of the piece is that of a society still recovering from the war, but on the brink of new experiences.

"Members of the younger generation in the cast would comment on things," says Allam

'It was perfect, it meant I had the chance to say goodbye alone'

of the attention to period detail. "With no mobile phones, you'd need a book of maps to get about. You needed a separate camera to take photographs. All those things we now take for granted, and people find it interesting. It wasn't necessarily a more innocent time, but interesting."

Evans acknowledges, too, the lure of the past, even if it's a fantasised version: "We all hanker for simpler lives. We have the speed [now] with which we can do things, but it comes at the cost of connecting to the simple things – of somebody making you a sandwich so you're nourished. It's not big, extravagant gestures, it's the simple things of looking after one another. There seems to be a nostalgia for that."

As for his own simple pleasures, Evans describes "my first coffee and notebook of a morning". He expands: "Apart from health, family and people, a couple of hours to write notes in my notebook, go out with my little camera, take some pictures, go to my darkroom to develop them. Being creative and having the agency over my own creativity."

When I ask Allam the same question he demurs, "I quite like a sandwich, perhaps not luncheon meat."

What then of the future? For Evans, who has directed several episodes of Endeavour in recent years, it's clear that he's ready to flex different muscles both in front of and behind the camera.

"Lightning rarely strikes twice, and it would be foolish for me to think of success like this continuing. I've had the enormous good fortune of that, it's a blessing. It's given me the agency to be able to pull projects together that I can be in and produce, not be in and direct. How can I make the most of everything I've learnt? That's what I'm excited about."

For Allam, however, the future seems a bit more straightforward. "Hopefully get other work. Otherwise I'll turn to crime or something," he says.

LATER THIS YEAR when the sun comes out and for once they don't find themselves heading to an Oxford of 50 years ago, how will they feel?

For Evans, it's "enormous gratitude. Privileged to have had that opportunity to tell a story for that amount of time. I only have gratitude."

Allam will think of the series as "something incredibly enriching in my life. I'll look back with pride, pleasure and regret that I'm not doing it any more, even though I think that's right."

There is no doubt we'll see both these actors again, although perhaps not together for a while. Before our chat, I binge-watched the whole final series on a Saturday. By Sunday, I felt strangely bereft, saying goodbye to the world of Endeavour and the rich characters within it. Evans nods when I tell him: "I felt the same."

LAUGHING POLICEMEN
Allam and Evans share a moment

'It was a lot to live up to'

But Russell Lewis is proud to follow the great Colin Dexter

We had a lot to live up to," is why every aspect of Endeavour was so top-notch, according to its creator Russell Lewis, who has written every one of the 36 feature-length episodes telling the origin story of Inspector Morse. "We all had such reverence for Colin Dexter [pictured right with John Thaw and Kevin Whately] that we didn't want to drop the ball. We didn't want to do anything that would tarnish people's affection for what had gone before. Colin was our true north from first to last. Everybody was mindful of doing their very best."

Lewis, who also penned several episodes of the original Inspector Morse and spin-off Lewis, as well as a host of other shows (including police drama Grace), has no trouble switching between drama of different periods, with what he calls "the timeless passions of anger, jealousy, greed. The meat and potatoes that give people a reason to bump people off, they don't change. Technology and politics change how we interact with the world, but the emotions stay the same."

But after more than a decade sculpting every scene of Endeavour, it's time to bid farewell. Lewis sounds philosophical. "Goodbye is built into any job in showbusiness; this has been a very long goodbye.

'We had such reverence for Colin we didn't want to drop the ball'

"It'll hit us all most when summer rolls around and we're not off to Oxford. One of the sadnesses post-Covid is we didn't have read-throughs for the last couple of series, so we were never in the same room at the same time. As much as that's a bit of a trial by ordeal for the writer, it was always lovely to see everyone gathered round that table. I will miss them all hugely."

Will he miss Endeavour, his central character? Lewis laughs. "They say that when Oliver Hardy died, Stan Laurel carried on writing Laurel and Hardy material. I certainly identify with that impulse."

And how would he like audiences to remember this unique show, that is so much more than a crime drama? "With affection, hopefully." CF

BUNNY MCDIARMID IS remembering the woman she used to be, before 10 July 1985. That year she was among the dozen crew of the Greenpeace flagship Rainbow Warrior, protesting against France's nuclear testing in the South Pacific.

When the ship docked in Auckland, New Zealand, French secret service agents, acting on their government's orders, planted two limpet mines on the ship, hidden beneath her waterline. The alleged objective was to render the ship unsalvageable, but crew member Fernando Pereira was killed. French government papers later revealed that President François Mitterrand approved the attack, yet he did not face one public question, let alone charges. Other high-profile figures lost their jobs but were never prosecuted.

"Before, I was very naive about world politics," says McDiarmid, a New Zealander who looks, at 66, much as she did 38 years ago. "We completely underestimated the power and influence that our non-direct action had. We never thought a nuclear superpower could feel so insecure about what we were doing that they would send a team halfway round the world to blow us out of the water. But that's what they did. And they didn't give a s**t about who they might hurt."

The story of the bombing is examined in a three-part documentary – Murder in the Pacific – beginning with the United States' postwar nuclear tests, which sparked the 1985 Greenpeace campaign. It includes interviews with two of the French agents who carried out the bombing. They express regret and say they were following orders. "The agents and the activists are not as different as you might think," contends the director, Chloe Campbell. "They are all conscientious in their different ways. I had never heard any of this story, but it's incredibly compelling – murder, resolute detective work, political cover-up, dogged journalism, the lengths a powerful nation will go to... I feel I've almost been ruined by this subject and I won't ever be offered anything with such a canvas again."

The documentary's title intentionally references more than Pereira's death. The USA conducted 67 nuclear tests between 1946 and 1958 on the Pacific Marshall Islands and in archive footage, islander Almira Matayoshi describes her experience of the radioactive fallout. "There was yellow powder. It covered all your body. My body was in a lot of pain," she explains. "People's hair fell out. My oldest son was a year old, and now he does not grow. Later, one of my babies was born and it did not have any bones in its body. All I could do was cry."

Decades later, with the Rongelap Atoll still

'They blew us out of the water'

polluted by fallout, Rainbow Warrior's crew responded to a call for help from Marshall Islands senator Jeton Anjain and, in 1985, relocated 300 inhabitants to islands more than 100 miles away. The plan was to stop over in Auckland before leading a flotilla to Mururoa Atoll in protest at French nuclear testing there. But Rainbow Warrior never got there.

'They didn't give a s**t about who they might hurt'

The documentary is a window on a time when environmentalism was far beyond the mainstream. Even the Rainbow Warrior's then skipper Peter Willcox describes the multi-national crew as "a bunch of crazy hippies". But their commitment to each other was absolute.

"I remember Fernando as very upbeat and easy-going," says McDiarmid. "He was the ship's photographer and very good at it. He talked a lot about his daughter who was then eight. He loved being a father."

The Greenpeace flagship was part of the team. "The Warrior looked after us and we looked after her," recalls McDiarmid. "If I close my eyes, I can still smell the tar melting in the heat of the day between the seams of the planks, and feel the texture of the deck beneath my feet."

In the early evening of Wednesday 10 July, with the ship moored at Auckland's Marsden Wharf, there was a birthday party on board. Bunny and her partner Henk, a crew member like her, left around 10pm to stay with her parents in the city. With others asleep on board, the first limpet mine exploded at 11.38pm, blasting a hole the size of a car. While others

LETHAL IMPACT

The bombed remains of the Rainbow Warrior and (inset, left) activist Fernando Pereira, who was killed in the explosion evacuated, Pereira was retrieving his photographic equipment from his cabin when the second mine went off seven minutes later. Trapped in the cabin, he drowned.

McDiarmid's voice still registers bewilderment as she recalls the 2am phone call from the first mate Martini Gotje, alerting her.

"He said the ship was sunk at the wharf and Fernando was missing. I couldn't make sense of it. Not long after that, the navy divers found Fernando. It was incredibly fortunate more people weren't killed."

The surviving crew huddled round a tiny television in a rented house, watching the nightly news as New Zealand's police exposed the unbelievable truth.

"The French thought they could do whatever they liked and get away with it," she says. "As a strategy to deal with us, it was stupid. It showed they had no idea what made Greenpeace tick, and they underestimated the brilliant job the New Zealand police did with no help. Australia, the US and the British all backed France. Shame on them for ever.

"It's not true that it's unthinkable now. Governments often make decisions that mean ordinary people are expendable for political purposes. The lives of environmental activists are often threatened. Nuclear powers will go to great lengths to defend their madness and their weapons of mass destruction."

The documentary includes British government figures of the time Michael Heseltine and Malcolm Rifkind stating that the KGB had infiltrated Greenpeace. McDiarmid simply laughs. "We have nothing to hide. Our transparency is a major strength."

Having worked on the documentary for a year, Chloe Campbell has some sympathy for the French agents who carried out the bombing.

"They pushed back against the plan," she comments. "I think the French government's motivation was rooted in Germany's occupation of France in the Second World War, which was a national humiliation. Their nuclear fleet restored national pride."

"In 1985 they were trying to avoid being humiliated again, this time by Greenpeace. But instead, their actions created a hundred times more humiliation than would ever have been created by – as Peter Willcox puts it – activists waving a few flags near the nuclear testing exclusion zone."

MCDIARMID IS NOW retired from her professional involvement with Greenpeace. She and Henk, who have a 34-year-old daughter, live on a boat currently moored in Grenada. They will sail it home to New Zealand over the next two years. But some things don't mellow with time. McDiarmid has no truck with the French agents expressing contrition.

"I don't buy 'I'm just a soldier following orders'. You're also a human being with a brain and a heart. You are responsible for your own actions and you have to live with those actions. At the end of my life, I want to think I was an OK person. I don't believe those people will. They could easily have given us a warning. They have to take personal responsibility for the murder of Fernando and an act of terrorism."

"But I can't live with extreme anger in my life all the time. It's too hard – and there are so many extraordinary things happening to make change. I'm an optimist. There's still a possibility for something better and I can be part of that."

'I'm not that brave'

Stephen Fry uncovers the remarkable story of two members of the Dutch resistance who saved thousands from the Nazis – but whose heroism was wiped from history

THE RT INTERVIEW BY SIMON HATTENSTONE

DUTCH RESISTANCE
Artist Willem Arondeus (top) and (above) musician Frieda Belinfante saved the lives of thousands of Jewish people during the Second World War

STEPHEN FRY HAS made a documentary about the most remarkable Second World War heroes you'll have never heard of. Willem and Frieda are their names and, once you know of their deeds, you won't forget them.

Willem Arondeus, an artist and writer, and Frieda Belinfante, a cellist and conductor, lived in the Nazi-occupied Netherlands and became prominent members of the Dutch resistance in the 1940s. Both were gay. At least 80 per cent of the Dutch Jewish community were murdered during the war, but Willem and Frieda helped hatch a plot to forge identity cards, saving thousands of Jewish lives. It was a brilliant scam, all the more impressive because Dutch identity cards, which contained their own watermark, were then the most sophisticated in the world. But the forgery was merely the start of one of the most audacious acts of sabotage in the Second World War.

Willem and Frieda lived open gay lives in Holland – an act of astonishing bravery in itself at the time. Willem came out at the age of 17 to his father and was disowned by his family. Meanwhile, Frieda, who was Jewish, was invited to form a chamber orchestra at the prestigious Concertgebouw in Amsterdam and, in doing so, became the first female conductor and artistic director of a professional orchestra in Europe.

Fry, an actor-writer-director famous for his knowledge, says what amazed him most about the story is that he had never heard of it. "I don't pretend I know the story of every resistance cell in every occupied country of the war, but I know a bit about [French resistance movement hero] Jean Moulin and [British secret agent] Violette Szabo, people like that. This was all new to me, though, and it's a story that really should be told. I felt it was something I had to do. It's the least I could do for such extraordinary people. It's quite shocking how unknown they are, even in Holland."

Fry is Zooming from Los Angeles, where he is shooting the latest series of The Morning Show with Reese Witherspoon and Jennifer Aniston. His hair is long and wild, his beard ragged, and he's not looking his normal self. Fry apologises for his appearance, attributing it to another film he's working on.

It feels as if Fry was born to tell this story. The 65-year-old is gay, Jewish and lost family in the Holocaust. Even now, having finished the documentary, he cannot stop thinking about Willem and Frieda. The film asks big questions about character – what made them willing to risk their lives for others, and was their bravery related to their profession and sexuality? To his shame, Fry admits he was surprised that artists could be such heroes. He shouldn't have been, he says. "After all, the first act of putting paint on the canvas or putting out a book or poem that you expect people to read is an act of courage."

It has also made him question his own courage. "Would I be that brave? In a peculiar way, I think I'm too much of a coward not to have got involved with the resistance. In other words, if I had a group of friends and they said to me, 'We're forming a resistance group and we need some of your skills and ideas, would you join?', I'd be afraid because I'd be sticking my neck out to say yes. I'd be much more afraid to say no. What would I look like to these friends? It's a social cowardice, which is strangely stronger than a military cowardice."

'I'm afraid they were forgotten because of inherent homophobia'

Would he have been courageous enough to initiate the resistance? "That I doubt. You've gone straight to the heart of it. I suspect I'd have to wait till somebody else suggested it." Fry has been a prominent gay rights campaigner over the decades. He says he recently took an audit of his activism, and it proved his point about being a joiner but not a starter.

"As the HIV crisis grew in the 1980s and 90s, I did a lot of shows and was in charge of the fundraising arm of the Terrence Higgins Trust, but would I go to the barricades like Peter Tatchell did? No. I'm not as brave as he is, and indeed a part of me thought, 'I wish you wouldn't do that, Peter.' I now think, 'I'm so glad you did that, you were right, I was wrong. I was a coward, you were brave. You saw with the clarity I could never have.'" He smiles. "But I've always been like that because I'm a liberal; a milksop hand-wringing liberal."

IN NOVEMBER, FRY quit Twitter, where he had 12.5 million followers. Was that an act of resistance? "It had nothing to do with anything but Elon Musk's takeover," he says. "Twitter should not be in the hands of an individual. It should be in the hands of a grey board that tries to do the right thing. Yes, it may be a furious, screaming crucible of culture war, but those who run it shouldn't be involved in that. So I simply stepped away and said goodbye and left."

In the documentary, we see Willem and Frieda become ever more fearless. When they ran out of money to make forged documents, Frieda approached the brewer Henry Heineken to ask if he would help. She had no way of ▷ ◁ knowing whether he was sympathetic or a Nazi loyalist.

Heineken, a music lover and instrument collector, told her he would like to help, but the Nazis scrutinised his beer company's accounts and would notice if he withdrew a large amount from his account. Frieda suggested to him that he could buy her cello for a handsome sum. Is it a Stradivarius, Heineken asked her? No, she said, it's worth hardly anything, but you can pretend it's valuable. That money was used to keep the presses rolling as Willem and Frieda worked with a master printer on an industrial scale to produce around 70,000 duplicate identity cards.

The story morphed into an espionage thriller when they discovered that their great work was about to be undone because the numbers on their forged identity cards didn't match the numbers on the registration lists held at the Municipal Office for Population Registration in Amsterdam. There was only one thing for it, they decided – to destroy the registration office. Their plot involved drugging guards, stealing uniforms and ultimately blowing up the office while ensuring nobody got hurt.

THE DOCUMENTARY FEATURES archive interviews with Frieda from the 1990s. She has cropped white hair, wears a stylish suit, and exudes intellect, mettle and soul. "I tell you what, all my lesbian friends are going to have a new hero," Fry says. "They're going to have posters of her."

In the footage, Frieda describes how she helped mastermind the plot but wasn't allowed to bomb the building because she was a woman.

LATER LIFE
Frieda Belinfante
in the 1990s

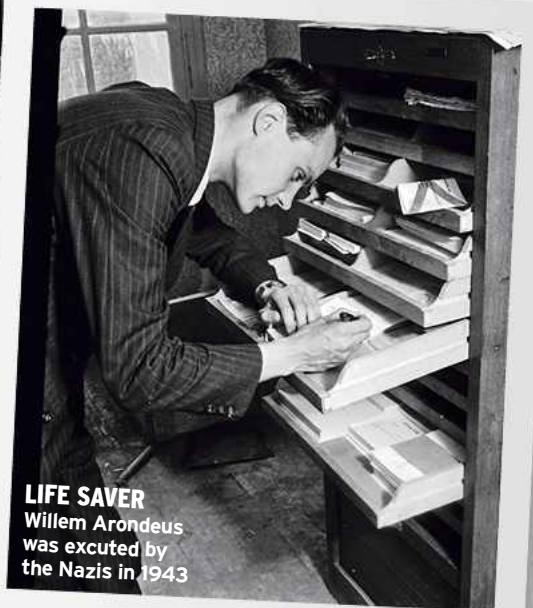

She wasn't best pleased. After an accomplice was caught and gave away names, Frieda lived as a man for three months in Holland before escaping to California where she established herself as a conductor. Her disguise was so convincing that she lived on the same road as her mother, and frequently passed her unrecognised. Frieda Belinfante died in Santa Fe, New Mexico in 1995, aged 90.

As for Willem, he was caught and sentenced to death alongside 13 others. For much of his life Willem, who believed he was a mediocre artist, had been shrouded in self-doubt. But now he had found a purpose. He was happy to go to his death, knowing he had saved lives. He held parties in his cell, mocked his jailers, and made a wonderful defiant speech at his trial, saying, "Tell the world that homosexuals are not cowards, that they are no less courageous than anybody else." In court, he pleaded guilty and insisted he was to blame for the plot.

'All my lesbian friends are going to have a new hero in Frieda'

Fry says he is in awe of him. "I was thinking it was not enough that he did what he did. When he was caught, he was actually braver than when he was acting in the resistance." On 1 July 1943, Willem Arondeus was executed, aged 48, alongside 11 conspirators (two of the group received clemency).

Why does Fry think Willem and Frieda are not household names in Holland? "I'm afraid it really was inherent homophobia in Dutch government and establishment circles." In 1970, a group of gay men wanted to highlight the role homosexuals played in the resistance. When they tried to put a wreath next to the monument celebrating resistance fighters at the annual National Commemoration in Amsterdam, they were arrested and the wreath was destroyed.

LIFE SAVER
Willem Arondeus was executed by the Nazis in 1943

Fry says the story of Willem and Frieda has made him more self-aware in surprising ways. Although he is friends with many artists, he is now more convinced than ever that he is not one himself. "I love artists and move with artists as it were, but know I'm not one, artists don't give a f*** what people think of them. I give all kinds of f***s what people think of me. I'm an absolute wuss. I'm a people pleaser, and I'm an entertainer. An artist is more dangerous than that. Artists bite the hands that feed them."

MAKING THE PROGRAMME has also made Fry rethink his relationship with Judaism. While still an atheist, he feels more culturally Jewish than ever. In Iron Box, the film he's grown his hair for, he plays an old Polish Jew who revisits Auschwitz and the horrors of his youth. "The fact I'm doing this film in Poland wasn't irrelevant to having made this documentary. I'm not going to say I've become more Jewish than I was because I still have no sense of Judaic responsibilities to rabbis and synagogues, but you can't let your identity be decided by your enemies."

"If the Nazis would just take one look at my birth certificate and put me in a death camp, it's absurd for me to say I'm not Jewish. I'm part of the Jewish race, and it gives me a glow – the Yiddish word is naches – when Jewish people do well. But also, when Jewish people let themselves down or misbehave, I think, 'Oh God, this is going to give the antisemites such fuel; why does he have to behave like that or why does this country have to behave like that?'"

What would he like us to take from Willem and Frieda's story? Simple, he says – to recognise their courage and honour it. "I want people to join me in applauding and celebrating these unremembered people, and making sure they'll never be unremembered again."

TRYING TIMES

Wales and England fans are about to find out which team is in a deeper hole

PLENTY OF PEOPLE in England enjoy rugby, though many only watch internationals when England play. But the way the fixtures fell in the last round of the Six Nations, it's possible that some of them, almost by accident, found themselves watching a belter of a match as Ireland ran out 32-19 victors over France.

Both sides were full of outstanding individuals giving their best in a team context. Then, the following day, England faced Italy. Ouch.

Although they scored five tries in a scrappy 31-14 victory, England played with two fixed ideas: either set up a maul or, better still, kick the ball as far away as possible. This isn't a tactic to be admired. You kick the ball away because you're worried about making mistakes, because your backs are no good, or because you think the opposition defence has the beating of you.

England coach Steve Borthwick accepted that, two matches into his tenure, his team were not up to the standards shown by Ireland and

'England can easily be rattled; Wales will fancy themselves as rattlers'

France. "I can't tell you how much, but we are behind them." He wasn't the only one to notice.

But there is some comfort at hand. England did at least beat Italy – and they can always say, "We're not Wales." Four years ago, Warren Gatland coached Wales to 14 successive wins. Now, two matches into his second term (both of them defeats), Wales have lost 11 of their last 14 matches and sit ninth in the world rankings.

That's not even the worst of it. There's a sexism scandal in Welsh rugby, a continuing investigation into the culture of the Welsh Rugby Union and, as I write, reports that some players are considering taking strike action. So far in the Six Nations, Wales have been well beaten by Ireland and Scotland, and are bottom of the table with a points difference of minus-52.

WINNING WAYS
Max Malins makes a break against Wales in England's 23-19 victory in the 2022 Six Nations

"We are," Gatland said, "in a little bit of a hole."

So here's the good news: Wales next play England in Cardiff. They will be hoping – at the least – for a dead cat bounce; this is an expression of stock market punters meaning temporary relief from long-term decline.

However, Wales seem almost incapable of scoring tries and they kick the ball to the opposition even more avidly than England. They must put their faith in the fact that Welsh players usually find their best form when the opposition is England. Their opponents on Saturday can easily be rattled, and Wales will fancy themselves as rattlers.

ENGLAND SUPPORTERS are used to certain traditions in these encounters – at their worst, performances are built on outmoded tactics, blame-avoidance and decisions based on the fear of what people say if it goes wrong.

Before the match against Italy, Borthwick made the unusual statement that the England players were not good at anything. "This is a rebuild and there is plenty to do," he said. But there are always flickers of promise. The centre Ollie Lawrence, coming into the team against Italy, had some thrilling moments with his straight-line running, while Jack Willis's return to the back row was full of go. Then, just as things looked interesting, England kicked the ball away again.

Before the tie of the weekend when France host Scotland on Sunday, England v Wales is a contest to see which team is in the deeper hole.

Both sides must win, if only to avoid despair, and that makes it an oddly compelling prospect.

For the sake of fans' sanity, here are two things not to think about during the match: one, that there's a World Cup coming up in the autumn, and two, that rugby union can provide sustained passages of beauty.

GAME SHOW

Cheat Available from Wednesday

Only a few weeks since Mick Carter was lost to the waves in EastEnders, Danny Dyer is back – but his new project continues the flirtation with game-show hosting he began on BBC1's The Wall. This one looks more up his street, since instead of getting angry with inanimate balls he can now call the contestants themselves wrong 'uns, liars and cheats – because they have to be those things in order to win the big cash prize. Everyone has a hidden red button that tells them the answers to general knowledge questions if they're stuck – but they're penalised if their rivals guess they've used it. Ellie Taylor excitedly co-hosts. JACK SEALE

COMEDY

A Whole Lifetime with Jamie Demetriou

Available from Tuesday

The star/creator of Stath Lets Flats scores another hit with a sketch show that regularly causes the same sort of snorting cry-laughter as Netflix's big skit success, I Think You Should Leave. Roughly themed around the various stages of life, it features Demetriou as a gallery of oddball losers, including a teen who can't be bothered to have sex with his girlfriend, a murderous dad at a nice barbecue and a dying man thanking his body for everything. Some of the scenes are less sketches and more just vibes, but when Demetriou nails a character, you'll be roaring. JS

ROMANTIC COMEDY

Your Place or Mine ★★ 12 Available now

Reese Witherspoon and Ashton Kutcher star as old friends who swap houses in this blandly formulaic romcom. While she has a fling with an editor in New York, and he looks after her shy son (Wesley Kimmel), the pair begin to wonder if they belong together. Instead of diving headfirst into this romantic conundrum, writer/director Aline Brosh McKenna wastes time on subplots that keep the stars separated for too long. With laughs in short supply, it's up to supporting players Tig Notaro and Zoë Chao to deliver the few flashes of wit. KEVIN HARLEY

THRILLER

Fall ★★★ 15

Available from Thursday

This vertigo-inducing thriller follows the plight of two climbers stranded atop a remote radio tower with no way down. Shazam! star Grace Caroline Currey plays a grieving climber whose vlogger pal (Virginia Gardner) suggests a day spent scaling a 2,000-ft high tower might help her regain her mojo. However, the structure is out in the Mojave Desert, and the ladders are rusting and rickety, making the pair's hike more perilous than they anticipated. Writer/director Scott Mann delivers a nail-biting and visceral survival-of-the-fittest tale. JEREMY ASPINALL

DRAMA

Sex/Life

Season two available from Thursday

The sinfully trashy drama returns for a second season. It stars Sarah Shahi as glamorous Manhattan mum Billie, who in season one blew up her domestic life by reconnecting, and having a steamy affair with, the man she dated when she was younger. The probably quite understandable end of Billie's marriage brings a shake-up in the new episodes, as her ex and her friends all succumb to the dilemma that has overwhelmed Billie: can you maintain a professional and family life while also enjoying buckets of explicit, glossily filmed fantasy sex? JS

Nocebo ★★★ 15

Available 22 February

This eerie psychological thriller stars Eva Green and Mark Strong as a couple whose lives are thrown into disarray when a Filipino caregiver (Chai Fonacier) arrives at their home offering cures for the mysterious illness plaguing Green's character. Proceedings take a surreal turn in an intriguing story with a strong political message. Fonacier stands out among the excellent cast, and although the final act loses momentum, director Lorcan Finnegan crafts a distinct atmosphere of unease. PATRICK CREMONA

REALITY CONTEST

Next in Fashion

Available from Friday

Three years since its first season, after which it was cancelled, the reality contest that seeks a new generation of fashion designers is back. So is co-host Tan France, but his fashionista colleague Alexa Chung isn't. Those are big stilettos to fill, but model Gigi Hadid (below with France) is hardly an obscure replacement. She maintains the show's emphasis on fun as the seamsters let their imaginations run riot in pursuit of a big prize. JS

DRAMA

Who Were We Running From?

Available from 24 February

Based on a bestselling novel by Perihan Magden, this Turkish drama plays on the idea that hotels are places full of mystery, with goodness knows what potentially happening in the room next door. We follow a mother and her teenage daughter, who move from place to place leaving carnage in their wake and evading their fate, thanks to a series of near misses. But why are they incognito and who is interested in their whereabouts? Go on an unconventional journey to find out. JS

DRAMA

Daisy Jones & the Six Episodes 1–3 available from Friday

Whatever happened to 1970s pop gods Daisy Jones & the Six? They never existed, but this drama tells their story, drawing on the excesses and inner schisms of real groups like Fleetwood Mac to spin a tale about how the best music often stems from personal turmoil. Presented in a semi-mockumentary format, the ten-part series, based on the book of the same name by Taylor Jenkins Reid, stars Riley Keough as fictional frontwoman Daisy. As well as being a seasoned lead actor who is adept at playing a headstrong wild child, Keough has the right breeding for the role: she is Elvis Presley's granddaughter. JACK SEALE

The Kindness of Strangers ★★★

 The title may sound trite, but this ensemble drama from Lone Scherfig is full of pleasant surprises. Set in New York, it follows an overworked emergency room nurse (Andrea Riseborough) and a desperate mother (Zoe Kazan) who is fleeing her abusive husband with two frightened kids in tow. Repeated visits to a Russian restaurant owned by a kooky Bill Nighy anchor the narrative, while Caleb Landry Jones, Jay Baruchel and Tahar Rahim (above with Nighy) round out the excellent cast. EMMA SIMMONDS

COURTROOM DRAMA

Argentina, 1985 ★★★★★ Available now

 Santiago Mitre's Oscar-nominated courtroom drama is a powerful account of what is recognised as the biggest trial for war crimes since Nuremberg. Set in 1985, the real-life story sees nine military leaders put in the dock for human rights abuses during Argentina's seven-year dictatorship. Ricardo Darín plays earnest chief prosecutor Julio Strassera, who is joined by his younger deputy (Peter Lanzani, above right with Darín) to help find witnesses to these gut-wrenching crimes. The result is a film that forgoes Hollywood grandstanding for something affectingly compassionate. JAMES MOTTRAM

ACTION COMEDY

Die Hart: the Movie ★★★

Available from 24 February

 Stand-up and comic actor Kevin Hart plays an exaggerated version of himself in this feature-length reworking of a 2020 TV series, in which he tries his hand at action-movie roles. To prepare, he enrolls in a boot camp run by a grizzled stuntman (John Travolta). Hart's likeability helps proceedings, even when the film's Hollywood in-jokes miss the mark. Jean Reno provides some laughs as a pompous European director, but the movie ultimately lacks the focus and bite of the show that spawned it. TERRY STAUNTON

SCI-FI DRAMA The Mandalorian

Season 3 episode 1 available from Wednesday

When it comes to being the best Star Wars show on television, The Mandalorian now faces stiff competition from Andor. All the same, a new series of space-western adventures is still a major event, and the man in the mysterious helmet, Pedro Pascal, is even more of a star now thanks to his lead role in Sky Atlantic's The Last of Us. Season three sees the wandering mercenary plan a homecoming, while continuing to get into a scrape on a different planet every week and taking good care of Grogu, aka Baby Yoda. The sets and effects remain the most spectacular on TV. JS

Episodes 1–10 of series 2 available from Wednesday

The victories achieved by the staff at Abbott Elementary school are always small but sweet. But in the real world, there has been major success, with the Philadelphia-set sitcom winning big at the Golden Globes and Emmys. The acclaim is well-deserved, with creator and star Quinta Brunson (above) having crafted an almost flawless comedy filled with characters constantly jostling to become a viewer's favourite. As season two begins, it's Brunson's alter-ego Janine who's centre stage as she faces eviction following her break-up with feckless Tariq. DAVID BROWN

DOCUMENTARY

Finding Michael

Available from Friday

A climbing documentary like no other. Spencer Matthews, once of Made in Chelsea, was ten years old when his older brother Michael disappeared shortly after reaching the summit of Everest in May 1999. Some 23 years later, his family were sent a photograph that could be of Michael's body, previously presumed lost to the snow and ice. As Matthews assembles a crew to search the very top of the world, a probably hopeless, certainly dangerous mission asks questions about how the grieving can obtain closure. JS

SERIES FINALE

We've reached the final episode of this Yellowstone prequel, but a second season is on the way – as is Bass Reeves starring David Oyelowo, yet another Yellowstone spin-off, which is filming now. As for 1923 itself, it might just be the best show in the franchise: setting it in Montana just as the Great Depression hits has given it a steely jeopardy, as has the dark subplot about an Indigenous girl rebelling against her Catholic educators. Then there's the cast: Helen Mirren, Harrison Ford and Timothy Dalton have all added serious class to a weighty drama. JACK SEALE

DOCUMENTARY

Sergio Leone: the Italian Who Invented America

★★★★ Available now

Director Sergio Leone left an indelible mark on cinema, with films such as his "Dollars" trilogy and Once upon a Time in America. Francesco Zippel's documentary offers a retrospective of Leone's life and career, with the contributions of his family, collaborators (including Clint Eastwood and Ennio Morricone) and famous fans (Quentin Tarantino, Martin Scorsese) blended with movie clips and behind-the-scenes archive. As an in-depth appreciation of a master film-maker, this ticks the essential boxes. JAMIE HEALY

DRAMA

The Independent ★★★

Available from 24 February

Celebrity politics and journalistic ethics clash in this shallow but watchable conspiracy drama. Jodie Turner-Smith plays an ambitious reporter who uncovers a scandal involving an independent presidential candidate (John Cena, above); Brian Cox's hard-nosed columnist helps her investigate. Director Amy Rice briskly establishes the set-up and characters, only to stumble over implausible plot twists. But Turner-Smith is engaging as the dogged lead, and Cox is captivating as the veteran defender of a beleaguered press. KEVIN HARLEY

ANIMATION

Where Is Anne Frank ★★★★★ PG Available from Saturday

With this animated drama, writer/director Ari Folman (Waltz with Bashir) brings the story of Anne Frank to a new generation in a way that feels fresh and urgent. In the present day, Anne's imaginary friend Kitty magically rises from her diary and discovers a world where Anne's name is exploited and her humanist message ignored, as refugees fleeing war are logged and marked for deportation. Meanwhile, in flashbacks, Anne emerges as a complex teenager with her own talents, opinions and imperfections. Folman employs a range of styles, and the result is both vibrant and desperately sad. STEPHEN APPELBAUM

Party Down

All 6 eps of series 3 available 24 Feb

The cult comedy returns for season three, 13 years after it was axed. If you don't know it, you know a lot of the cast: Adam Scott, Jane Lynch and Megan Mullally return, while Jennifer Garner and James Marsden join them. We're back with the titular events catering company, whose staff are actors and writers who wish they were doing something else. With a decade having passed and their dreams having still refused to come true, the show's edgy farce intensifies as these losers prepare to screw up anew. JACK SEALE

TRAVELOGUE

The Reluctant Traveller

All 8 episodes available 24 February

Schitt's Creek star Eugene Levy brings his curmudgeonly septuagenarian shtick to a new travel series, which sends him to some of the world's top destinations against his will. At first it's a simple comic idea: when Levy visits Lapland, he fears the cold and grumbles about travel by dog sled not being smooth. It's funny, but when he goes to the Maldives, his scepticism about whether mankind should build super-luxury hotels in a tiny island nation gives his trip a thoughtful, spiky flavour. JS

COMING-OF-AGE DRAMA

Armageddon Time ★★★★★ 15

Available now

Writer/director James Gray (Ad Astra) reflects on his adolescence for this thoughtful and moving coming-of-age drama. The film is set in 1980s New York, where 12-year-old Paul (Banks Repeta), who is part of a Jewish-American family, and his African-American classmate Johnny (Jaylin Webb), learn hard lessons about race and class at school. With the help of a strong script, young newcomers Repeta and Webb hold their own alongside co-stars Anne Hathaway and Jeremy Strong, but it's Anthony Hopkins who shines brightest, giving an emotive performance as Paul's grandfather.

FACTUAL DRAMA

The Silent Twins ★★★★★ 15

Available from Monday

This drama tells the strange – but true – story of June and Jennifer Gibbons, twins who grew up in Wales in the 1970s and communicated only with each other. After a crime spree, the sisters were committed to Broadmoor, the high-security psychiatric hospital, where they caught the attention of investigative journalist Marjorie Wallace. Writer Andrea Seigel and director Agnieszka Smoczyńska tell their story with a real emotional regard for the Gibbons, aided by affecting performances from Letitia Wright and Tamara Lawrance as the adult twins. STEVE MORRISSEY

SOCIAL DRAMA

Tori and Lokita ★★★★★ 15

Available from Monday

Two refugees find themselves trapped between unyielding bureaucracy and criminal exploitation in the Dardenne brothers' humanistic drama. Eleven-year-old Tori (Pablo Schils) and teenager Lokita (Joely Mbundu) forge a tight bond on their flight from Africa to Belgium, but soon become stuck in legal limbo and drug dealing. The youngsters are portrayed with compassion; while some plotlines feel overly familiar, the emotions in this moving film do ring true. AMBER WILKINSON

THE WHEEL
Michael McIntyre's

game show

GAME SHOW

Michael McIntyre's The Wheel

7.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer
Recent events have shown Saturday-night scheduling to be a merciless arena. Catchpoint: axed after four series. I Can See Your Voice: ditched following two. But strutting his way back onto our screens this evening is Michael "Midas Touch" McIntyre and the quiz that's arguably become a bigger show than his Big Show.

But to what do we attribute The Wheel's success? It is a terrific format and McIntyre is an irrepressible host. But would it have embedded itself into our collective consciousness without that earworm of a theme tune? In case you were wondering, it was written by Paul Farrer, who also composed the intros for The Chase, The Weakest Link, Ninja Warrior and Gladiators (the guy must be some kind of light-entertainment genius).

Crucially here, it gives the celebs sitting on the spokes the chance to express themselves in rhythmic arm gestures as the wheel rotates, which is always a delight.

And among those trying to keep in time tonight are Stephen Mangan, Sam Quek, Kate Humble and Nihal Arthanayake. Let's spin!

Six Nations Rugby Union

1.25pm ITV1/4.00pm BBC1/S4C
Catch up via ITVX/ iPlayer

Can anyone stop Andy Farrell's men in green? After dismantling last year's champions France with a dynamic display in Dublin, the answer may well be no – unless Italy's boys in blue spring an extraordinary result in Rome today (k/o 2.15pm ITV1).

Then it's off to Cardiff for a match between two sides in dire need of momentum and stability. Despite the return of Warren Gatland, Wales remain without a win, and England's loss to Scotland has had coach Steve Borthwick under pressure, too. As a result, home advantage is likely to be key, with England looking for their first victory at the Principality Stadium since 2017 (k/o 4.45pm BBC1/S4C). MAX COPEMAN

ENTERTAINMENT

Ant and Dec's Saturday Night Takeaway

7.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

Like almost every Ant and Dec vehicle, very little changes on this show. Fronting the unbending formats of Britain's Got Talent and I'm a Celebrity, their careers must feel like Groundhog Day. Mind you, they're no doubt crying all the way to the bank.

That means if you know Takeaway, you'll know what's in store: there's a guest announcer (David Tennant), an Ant v Dec challenge, and the suddenly omnipresent Alison Hammond is pranked with Undercover. Always a highlight is the scripted mini drama that runs through the series, and this year Richard Wilson plays the head of ITV in Murder at Bigwig Manor. Place your bets for how long it'll be until he says, "I don't believe it."

HISTORY

Bettany Hughes's Treasures of the World

7.00pm C4 Full series on All 4

She's previously written a book about Aphrodite, so you sense that Hughes is on familiar ground as she arrives in the goddess's birthplace, Cyprus. She's here to explore a place, she reminds us, that's at the crossroads of Europe, Asia and Africa. And first, she's looking at what Aphrodite and her various incarnations meant to the ancient islanders.

But her travels also take her to the important Roman port of Kourion, fascinating Byzantine churches in the Troodos Mountains (where she's slightly caught out and must seek some surprising shelter), and to the capital Nicosia. Here she gets access to the buffer zone between the north and south of the island, where history has been frozen. GILL CRAWFORD

Harry Wild Investigates

8pm Channel 5 Catch up on My5; originally shown on Acorn TV

Star Jane Seymour would no doubt balk at the comparison but her whodunnit is essentially Hetty Wainthropp Investigates for a new generation. The concept is pretty much the same: retiree turns detective with a young reprobate serving as her sidekick. But it has a zip and pep that dear old Hetty lacked; that's mainly down to Seymour's spirited performance as former literature professor Harriet "Harry" Wild, who inveigles her way into the cases of her Dublin police detective son.

With her background in the classics, she's able to clock the clues that the official force fails to register – in this opener, it's the links that an investigation has to an obscure Elizabethan play. DB

P!nk Live in the Piano Room

8.15pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

As a performer, pop star P!nk is renowned for her breathtaking stadium shows with aerial acrobatics and extravagant optics. Here – as the latest big name to pop into the pared-back surroundings of Radio 2's Piano Room – her commanding voice will instead be firmly centre stage.

Across a near 30-year career, the US singer has amassed impressive accolades and a formidable body of work, including selling over 130 million records. Tonight, she's discussing her life and music with Jo Whiley at Maida Vale in London and is performing nine tracks with the BBC Concert Orchestra including her hit single Try and a cover version of Sinéad O'Connor's Nothing Compares 2 U. FT

DRAMA

Casualty

8.50pm BBC1

Catch up via iPlayer

After his man-of-action debut, you'd have thought Casualty would continue to go big on new clinical lead Max. But while he does feature in this episode (shouting at a patient and sounding quite like Michael Caine while doing so), the spotlight is instead being shone on Marcus's poisonous relationship with Stevie.

Over the course of 50 minutes, we see realisation start to dawn on her that she's being coercively controlled. And while the script is, at times, a little heavy handed, it'll hopefully prove to be of help to anyone out there who hasn't yet spotted the warning signs that they, too, might be being manipulated and humiliated by an abusive partner. DB

Atlantic Crossing

9.00pm, 10.10pm Drama

Catch up via UKTV Play

The Nazi plot has been foiled, though the threat against the Norwegian Crown Princess and her children, who are living under the protection of the American President, is still very real. However, that's not the reason that her husband wants the kids to be with him in London. He's jealous of her relationship with FDR, which is a bit awkward because she's just persuaded the president to supply Norway with a warship.

In this concluding double bill, the war finally seems to be ending but the celebratory mood is tinged with sadness. Olav and Martha's enforced separation has taken its toll, while FDR's health fails. JANE RACKHAM

SERIES FINALE

I CAN'T LET GO
The versatile Linda Ronstadt has spent decades in the spotlight

Linda Ronstadt: the Sound of My Voice

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

A straight but superb history of musical excellence, which benefits from being told largely by the star. As the retired US singer looks back on her impressively varied career, A-list contributors (Dolly Parton, Don Henley, Emmylou Harris, Bonnie Raitt) speak of a "perfectionist" and a "determined woman".

The title of the film is both significant and poignant. It was this passionate voice that she applied to folk, country, rock, light operatic and Mexican stylings; that was penetrating in interview; and that she later lost to Parkinson's. But just as Stranger Things gave Kate Bush a renaissance, the hit HBO show The Last of Us has done the same for Ronstadt via the use of her 1970 song Long, Long Time, a love story that never was.

The strength of her friendships is reinforced by Sisters in Country at 11.25pm, and before that at 10.35pm there's her Old Grey Whistle Test gig in London from 1976. MARK BRAXTON broadly comic account of the real-life rise of a female-voice choir follows a group of women as they unite to sing at a British Army base while their soldier partners are on tour in Afghanistan. A class struggle ensues between officer's wife Kristin Scott Thomas and laid-back slob Sharon Horgan, and they're joined by Lara Rossi's tone-deaf siren and Gaby French, who suffers from stage fright. It all builds to a feel-good climax that will have you on your feet, cheering and crying. ANDREW COLLINS (UK 2019, swearing, sexual references, HD)

COMEDY DRAMA Director Peter Cattaneo's

The Secret of Kells ★★★★★

11.00am-12.40pm Film4 PG

FANTASY Director Tomm Moore's Oscar-nominated Dark Ages saga tells the story of a novice monk who ventures into the forest on an epic mission. Marking the debut feature for Irish production house Cartoon Saloon, this visually ambitious film combines Celtic design with largely hand-drawn animation. DAVID PARKINSON (Fr/Bel/Ire 2009, HD)

The Band Wagon ★★★★★

12.30-2.20pm BBC2 U

MUSICAL This clever and witty musical stars Fred Astaire as a Broadway star who's out of step with the very modern production he has been hired to headline. It boasts brilliant direction from Vincente Minnelli, fabulous production design, and features the wonderful Cyd Charisse as Astaire's co-star. To many, this marks the peak of Astaire's screen work. TONY SLOMAN (US 1953, HD)

What Women Want ★★★★★

2.20-4.55pm C5 12

ROMCOM Mel Gibson seems to be winning the battle of the sexes in this inventive offering from director Nancy Meyers (The Holiday). Gibson plays a remains sensational entertainment. ALAN JONES (NZ/US 2005, edited for content, col/BW)

The Macaluso Sisters ★★★★★

9.00-10.25pm BBC4 15

DRAMA Emma Dante's evocative movie concerns five Italian sisters living in the apartment that belonged to their late parents. However, a trip to the beach leads to the death of one of their number, and life is never the same again. Dante's film takes flight in the second half, as it reunites with the four survivors in their later years. JAMES MOTTRAM (It 2020, violence, swearing, sexual references, nudity, HD)

Hancock ★★★★★

11.15pm-1.00am C4 12

COMEDY Relishing a chance to play against type, Will Smith stars here as an alcoholic, clumsy superhero, who costs the city millions every time he goes into action. Jason Bateman plays a PR expert who promises to help the hero smarten up his act. The movie shows a lot of invention and wit before it takes a turn for the melodramatic. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL (US 2008, violence, swearing, sexual references, HD)

The Beguiled ★★★★★

11.55pm-1.25am BBC1 (starts 1.10am in Scotland) 15

DRAMA Sofia Coppola directs this hypnotic, if rather academic, remake of the 1970 Clint Eastwood film about the goings-on at an all-girls school in Virginia during the US Civil War. Colin Farrell plays the wounded soldier who is taken in by Nicole Kidman and her charges, and whose presence provokes arousal, envy and violence. CALUM BAKER (US 2017, violence, a sex scene, HD)

Endeavour

8.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX; series 1–8 also available to stream

When we were last in the company of Endeavour (Shaun Evans), his relationship with alcohol was in danger of becoming abusive. But he returns looking lean and rejuvenated following a restorative tour of the West Country.

Yet this positive outlook doesn't last, as we know it can't. For this final series is all about bridging the gap between Evans's romantic take on Colin Dexter's detective and the more brooding figure we met when John Thaw made his debut back in 1987.

Loneliness defined the Oxford copper in his later years and, here in 1972, we see that sense of isolation start to build. Thursday (Roger Allam) is set to get a son-in-law in the form of Strange (Sean Rigby), as Endeavour has missed his opportunity to tell Joan (Sara Vickers) how he truly feels about her, opting instead to down pints secretively in dimly lit pubs. And with each sip, we begin to see how melancholy will eventually envelop the man who'll eventually become Inspector Morse. DAVID BROWN

FACTUAL

Antiques Roadshow

7.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Valuations would be inappropriate for this edition, because it celebrates nursing and relives some milestone moments in the history of the caring profession. There are a few clips of items from previous shows, but it's mainly filmed at St Thomas' and St Bartholomew's Hospitals in London, where it's salutary to hear the stories connected to the nursing memorabilia and to be reminded of the role nurses have played in wars, palliative care, Aids, the Covid pandemic, mental health and midwifery.

While some nurses (such as Edith Cavell, executed by the Germans during the First World War) are well known, many other equally brave and dedicated nurses are – quite simply – unsung heroes. JANE RACKHAM

MUSIC

Ravel's Daphnis et Chloé: Inside Classical

7.45pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

Nothing shakes the classical world quite as vigorously as the appointment of a new Chief Conductor to a prestigious orchestra. Last September, Yorkshire composer Ryan Wigglesworth's arrival at the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra raised a few eyebrows, but the adventurous but adroitly chosen programme for his SSO debut at Glasgow City Halls assuaged many doubts.

Olivier Messiaen's cycle of spiritual love songs, Poèmes pour Mi, is beautifully delivered. The highlight, though, is an aurally and visually sumptuous (and unashamedly accessible) take on Maurice Ravel's gorgeous ballet, Daphnis et Chloé.

Secrets of the Jurassic Dinosaurs

8.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

LAST EPISODE The badlands of Wyoming host one of the world's most bountiful dinosaur graveyards. But is it also a crime scene? In the engrossing final part, Liz Bonnin joins the dig team as they investigate whether any of the recently unearthed sauropods were killed by an allosaurus. The discovery of suspicious predator teeth suggests key evidence, but the palaeontologists risk their work being undone by a freak sandstorm.

Elsewhere, there is a fascinating segment on how the allosaurus compares to the T rex. Contrary to what happens in Jurassic Park, apparently the latter was so big and heavy that it couldn't run, lest it broke its legs. STEPHEN KELLY

The Gold

9.00pm BBC1 Full series on iPlayer

The police are fusing links in the criminals' chain, and Kenneth Noye is feeling the heat. Suspicious that the grip is tightening, he wants to change tack. But he hasn't bet on those around him inadvertently compromising his plan: Jeannie is slipping up, while gold seller associate Garth wants out altogether. Nerves are jangling more than the jewellery kept in John Palmer's pocket.

Frayed tensions are creating mistakes, yet Palmer is adamant they push on. "It's a poison passing through us," he says of the gold. "We've got to keep going until it's gone, and then we'll see what kind of life we've got left." By the end of this episode, we get an idea of what that might look like. FRANCES TAYLOR

The Warship: Tour of Duty

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

LAST EPISODE This six-part series and the maiden operational deployment of HMS Queen Elizabeth both draw to a close tonight – yet there's still time for climactic drama. As the warship departs the Pacific and begins its long voyage home, new captain Ian Feasey warns against demob happiness.

F-35 jets maintain round-the-clock patrols, ensuring they're combat-ready in case of Russian provocation. One morning, a £100m aircraft loses power and plunges into the eastern Mediterranean, but there are doubts over whether the pilot ejected in time. An object is then spotted in the sea, but is it them? MICHAEL HOGAN

Guy Martin's Great British Power Trip

9.00pm C4 Catch up via All4

LAST EPISODE Guy Martin's exploration of British power generation has been a journey through time. Episode one was largely about the gas-and coal-fired power stations of yesteryear, while the second instalment saw him investigate the renewable resources of the present. This final part sees Martin heading for the future, as he ventures into the world of nuclear fission.

Pressing the buttons on insanely complex experimental kit designed to mimic reactions at the heart of the sun impresses even the unflappable lorry mechanic. "Nowt's blown up, we're still here," he grins with relief. "Job's a peach..." CERI THOMAS

The Secret World of Incels

10.00pm C4 Catch up via All4

A strong disposition is required to stomach film-maker Ben Zand's unsettling documentary. Incels (short for "involuntary celibate") is a term for men who not only feel unable to interact with women, but actively despise them.

Through forums and message boards, repulsive content spreads – and sometimes, the violence graphically discussed spills out into the real world. Zand lifts the lid on how and why these lonely, angry young people have wound up with such abhorrent views. The common theme is unfathomably sheltered lives lived almost wholly online. It's tragic, yet it's also impossible to have sympathy with them. FT

Call the Midwife

8.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

SERIES FINALE Trixie is the undoubted princess of Poplar, but the signs are there that hers is not to be a fairy-tale wedding. "Matthew's mother has sold the family tiara!" she wails, little realising that this will be just the first obstacle before either bride or groom gets to say, "I do".

But anyone who's previously witnessed TV nuptials knows these things never go as planned. The Vicar of Dibley's dress got drenched, Suranne Jones decked a bridesmaid with a stiletto on Corrie... such calamities are on the order of every telly service. But no show yanks on heartstrings with the ferocity of Call the Midwife, and by the time Trixie gets into her gown, both soundtrack and tear ducts are in full gush.

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

Chariots of Fire ★★★★★

5.00-7.00pm BBC2 (not in Wales)

DRAMA Showing in tribute to director Hugh

Hudson, who passed away earlier this month, this film celebrates the human spirit with an old-fashioned innocence. It's the tale of two British athletes – contemplative Scottish missionary Eric Liddell (played by Ian Charleson) and anxious Jewish student Harold Abrahams (Ben Cross) – aiming for glory in the 1924 Olympics. Hudson draws upon Colin Welland's Oscar-winning screenplay to create a powerful study of the pair's contrasting characters and experiences. JOHN MARRIOTT (UK 1981, some swearing, brief nudity, HD)

Mr Popper's Penguins ★★★★★

1.10-3.05pm ITV2

PG

COMEDY There are high jinks in a Manhattan high-rise when Jim Carrey inherits half a dozen penguins in this enjoyable romp. Forming a bond with the birds, Carrey turns his apartment into a winter wonderland. Director Mark Waters maintains a lively pace, with the undeniably adorable penguins at the heart of the action. TERRY STAUNTON (US 2011, HD)

The NeverEnding Story ★★★★★

3.00-4.35pm BBC1

U

FANTASY This 1980s classic sees a young boy drawn by a magical book into a wondrous alternative world that is threatened by evil forces. The story is a touch simplistic, but children and adults alike will be dazzled by the stunning sets and special effects. The film proved quite a departure for Das Boot director Wolfgang Petersen. JOHN FERGUSON (WGer 1984, HD)

Snow White and the Huntsman ★★★★★

12

FANTASY Kristen Stewart stars in this gloomy retelling of the Snow White story, but Charlize Theron makes a deeper impact as the queen

The King's Speech ★★★★★

10.00-11.50pm BBC2

(starts 11.30pm in N Ireland) 12

DRAMA This moving tale is the type of thing the British film industry does so well. Colin Firth gives an Oscar-winning performance as King George VI, who suffered from a nervous stammer, prompting his wife Elizabeth (Helena Bonham Carter) to hire a speech therapist (Geoffrey Rush) to help him. The film takes a few liberties with the truth, but it delivers plenty of chuckles as it builds to its rousing finale. SP (UK/Aus/US 2010, swearing, HD)

Mud ★★★★★

11.10pm-1.15am BBC1

12

DRAMA Two 14-year-old boys encounter a fugitive in this rites-of-passage story. Matthew McConaughey excels as the wanted man, who asks the lads (Tye Sheridan, Jacob Lofland) to help him reconnect with his sweetheart (Reese Witherspoon). Much like Stand by Me, this junior adventure story is beautifully done and filled with terror and wonder. TREVOR JOHNSTON (US 2012, violence, swearing, HD)

Tulip Fever ★★

11.50pm-1.25am BBC2

(not in N Ireland) 15

DRAMA Based on the novel by Deborah Moggach, this drama set in 17th-century Amsterdam sees unhappily married Alicia Vikander and her lover, Dane DeHaan, investing in the booming tulip market. Director Justin Chadwick fills the screen with visual delights, but he struggles to unite the various subplots. JAMES LUXFORD (UK/US 2016, sex scenes, HD)

NEW RECRUIT

DCI Jessica James (Sinéad Keenan) has big shoes to fill – especially for Sunny (Sanjeev Bhaskar)

DRAMA

Unforgotten

9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX; series 1–4 also available to stream

NEW SERIES

Replacing a much-loved lead character is a tricky business and, more often than not, TV dramas will try to move things on as quickly as possible. Fearing that viewers will desert them, showrunners usually attempt to focus our attention on the excitement of the new rather than have us dwell on the past. But appropriately enough for a series called Unforgotten, there's no such desire here on the part of writer Chris Lang to erase Nicola Walker's Cassie from the story.

Indeed, echoes of her are everywhere, from the grief still etched on the face of her police partner Sunny Khan (Sanjeev Bhaskar) to her empty station desk. A workspace that's now set to be filled by DCI Jessica James (Sinéad Keenan), whose methods Lang boldly invites us to compare with Cassie's. "I don't like her," says Sunny after the brittle Jessica questions the ethos of the cold-case team. But, as we discover, there's a reason for this chilliness, and it lies in her life away from the force.

NEW SERIES

A more everyday take on Saving Lives at Sea, this new series follows an expert team of marine engineers and rescue divers as they battle problems both above and below the water to keep the south coast's waterways and shores running smoothly. They're a remarkable unit, responsible for carrying out maintenance, underwater expeditions and emergency call-outs. In this episode, Brighton Marina's main jetty is found to be on a tilt, causing havoc for residents and shop owners. Enter a young diver who's placed in serious danger when the low tide threatens to bring the entire concrete jetty down upon him. PAUL WHITELAW

Catch up via Freeview Play

NEW SERIES

Similar in title and intent to 2008's groundbreaking World War II In Colour, each episode of this documentary selects a turning point in the struggle and explains why the moment was so pivotal, via colourised footage and a succession of mostly British academics.

The first episode focuses on Dunkirk – the largest sea evacuation in history. The story is familiar: the flotilla of small boats; the RAF battling the Luftwaffe in the skies above them; the weather and German hubris working in British favour – but the footage and the detail the academics offer give it a new tint, literally. JOHN AIZLEWOOD

DRAMA

Better

9.00pm BBC1 All episodes available now on iPlayer

Col McHugh (Andrew Buchan) may be a big-time Leeds drug dealer, but he never really seems to be enjoying the spoils. OK, so he's got a fancy house, but he spends all his time in waxed jackets, whispering in the back seat of cars. It must be ever so dull. That ennui is probably why he's now taking on rival criminals in nearby Bradford, though what he perhaps hasn't counted on is loyalty-torn Lou (Leila Farzad) inadvertently almost igniting a turf war.

Her son Owen (Zak Ford-Williams), meanwhile, is getting closer to his new-found friend at the support group – unaware, of course, that it's Col's offspring Donal (Cel Spellman), who is, by turns, vulnerable and effectively sinister. DB

DRAMA

The Last of Us

9.00pm Sky Atlantic
Catch up via Sky Go/Now

After last week's showdown, Joel (Pedro Pascal) lies injured, but despite his best efforts, Ellie (Bella Ramsay) won't leave him behind.

And as she frantically searches for medicine we're treated to one of this show's trademark flashbacks, revealing how Ellie was first attacked by a fungus-infected zombie and learnt she was immune to the Cordyceps pandemic. Turns out, it was during an adorable date in an abandoned shopping mall.

Unfortunately, it's the weakest episode of the series. It's a lot of time to devote to Ellie's backstory and with an infected "Clicker" waiting to interrupt, it's hard to invest in her doomed romance.

Sex Actually with Alice Levine

10.00pm C4 Catch up via All 4

Alice Levine is going global in her quest to explore the weird and wonderful world of sex as this documentary returns. Looking at sex tech, there are plenty of surface-level sexploits to gawp at, such as her trip to a Berlin brothel staffed exclusively by silicon dolls operated with virtual reality. But it also digs deeper into whether there is a danger that VR, AI, and robot sex risk disconnecting people from the real world.

That's certainly the case with Alexander, who lives in North Carolina with a synthetic wife called Mimi (made real by an AI app). It is, however, hard to begrudge him his happiness. KAY RIBEIRO

Bent Coppers: Crossing the Line of Duty

10pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

Following on from tonight's Better there's more police corruption in this 2021 series narrated by Philip Glenister (Gene Hunt in Life on Mars). We're in the 1970s, an era of car chases with police in Triumphs pursuing villains in Jags. But it is deadly serious, a story of how a network of corrupt officers ruined lives.

We hear recordings made for a 1969 investigation in which a Met detective tells a south London criminal amiably: "If we find out you've done something, we want a share." Worse are the accounts by people "fitted up" for crimes in ways even Gene Hunt wouldn't try.

DAVID BUTCHER

SITCOM

Sliced

10pm BBC3 All episodes on iPlayer

Instead of commissioning new shows, BBC3 seems to be buying up Dave's catalogue of comedy. Next in the queue is Sliced – a sitcom that first aired in 2019 about two bumbling pizza delivery drivers, who are unlucky in both love and life.

Written by PhoneShop creator Phil Bowker and actor/writer Samson Kayo (Famalam, Bloods), it finds hapless Joshua (Kayo) and best friend Ricky (Theo Barklem-Biggs) up against an unhinged boss, demanding customers and in daft situations. Episode one sees Joshua smitten with new girl Naomi.

There are some meaty lines, but it is a bit crusty around the edges – perhaps because much of it is improvised. FRANCES TAYLOR

Bronson: Fit to Be Free?

9.00pm C4
Catch up via All 4

Charles Bronson is the UK's most notorious prisoner and has been behind bars for 48 years. Now he's due to make his case for release at a publicly held parole hearing. Very few criminal hearings have ever been staged in this manner – it's far from standard practice – but Bronson is an exceptional case for many reasons.

This two-parter (the concluding episode airs tomorrow at 9pm, C4) gives voice to some of his victims, plus members of the criminal justice system and those who consider themselves close to him. Bronson is (or at least, was) an explosively violent man. After serving his time and now aged 70, he may no longer pose any threat. But should he be released? Bronson's fame and the high-profile nature of his hearing might well prejudice the parole board's decision. There are no easy answers. PAUL WHITELAW

Bronson to be

Creed II ★★★ 9.00-11.35pm ITV4 12

BOXING DRAMA Ahead of Creed III's release in cinemas this Friday, here's a chance to catch up with the previous instalment in the successful Rocky spin-off series. Michael B Jordan returns as the young boxer coached to success by Sylvester Stallone's Rocky Balboa. This time, the opponent is the son of Ivan Drago (Dolph Lundgren), the man who killed Creed's father, Apollo, in the ring. The challenge leads to a parting of ways between fighter and trainer, amid further ruminations on family and legacy. The script is muddled by cliché, but the action in the ring is as gripping as ever. TERRY STAUNTON (US 2018, some violence, swearing, HD)

The Last Challenge ★★★ 11.30am-1.30pm TCM

WESTERN Boasting a strong script, this western freshens up some stock characters and familiar situations. There are assured performances from Glenn Ford as the gunfighter turned lawman, Angie Dickinson as the saloon keeper who loves him, and Chad Everett as the young gunslinger who wants to kill him to build a reputation. ALLEN EYLES (US 1967, HD)

Breaker Morant ★★★★★ 2.35-4.50pm Great Movies Action PG

DRAMA This impactful true story follows the plight of three Australian soldiers fighting the Boers, who are court-martialled by the British as scapegoats. Director Bruce Beresford draws powerful performances from Edward Woodward and Bryan Brown as two of the accused and Jack Thompson as their reluctant counsel. JOHN FERGUSON (Aus 1979)

Ha'penny Breeze ★★★ 3.00-4.30pm Talking Pictures TV U

DRAMA The Suffolk hamlet of Pin Mill provides the setting for this Ealing-esque production about two soldiers who return from the war and attempt to revive the fortunes of the harbour on the River Orwell. There's a degree of contrivance to the scenario, but director Frank Worth makes evocative use of the charming locale. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1950, BW)

Reach for the Sky ★★★★★ 3.25-6.10pm Film4 U

WAR This is a fine example of British cinema's unsentimental approach to depicting Second World War heroism. It's the story of Douglas Bader (played by Kenneth More, in one of his best performances), who lost his legs in a prewar flying accident and went on to become one of the RAF's most decorated heroes. Director Lewis Gilbert makes the drama as compelling as the action. DP (UK 1956, BW)

Sicario ★★★★★ 9.00-11.25pm Great Movies 15

THRILLER The unofficial war zone that is the US/Mexican border is the setting for this gripping thriller. Emily Blunt stars as a by-the-book FBI agent who is recruited to join Josh Brolin's special ops outfit, but soon finds herself plunged into a world of bloodshed. Her growing paranoia is well conveyed by director Denis Villeneuve and writer Taylor Sheridan. DAMON WISE (US 2015, violence, swearing)

The Gamma People ★★★ 9.00-10.35pm Talking Pictures TV

SCI-FI It's a rare TV showing for this anti-communist fable, which remains a unique oddity in the annals of British cinema. Paul Douglas and Leslie Phillips get jailed as spies in a mythical European country, whose education system involves bombarding children with radiation, creating either geniuses or idiots. Peculiar and quaint, this veers wildly between Ealing comedy and dystopian horror. ALAN JONES (UK 1956, BW)

Happy Death Day ★★★ 11.10pm-1.00am Film4 15

HORROR Groundhog Day gets a gruesomely funny reworking here, as student Jessica Rothe is murdered on her birthday. The scenario plays out over and over again, forcing Rothe to find out who wants her dead. A knowing sense of humour enlivens what is otherwise a fairly bog-standard slasher. The sequel premieres tomorrow, see p77. JAMES LUXFORD (US 2017, violence, sexual references, HD)

The Sisters Brothers ★★★★★ 11.15pm-1.10am BBC2 15

WESTERN Patrick DeWitt's idiosyncratic novel is brought searingly to the screen by director Jacques Audiard. Joaquin Phoenix and John C Reilly play the assassin siblings of the title, who are sent to find a chemist (Riz Ahmed) who has developed a divining substance to locate gold. Phoenix and Reilly make for an amusing, endearing but formidable pair. EMMA SIMMONDS (US/Fr/Rom/Sp 2018, violence, swearing, HD)

The Mormons Are Coming 9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

"We just want to talk to them. They're all just so busy," wails loveable Mormon missionary Jacob Cook from Utah, as he struggles through his first day of attempting to convert passers-by in Manchester. Utah may be the home of the Church of the Latter-Day Saints, but Chorley in Lancashire boasts a huge missionary centre that trains thousands of eager 18- to 25-year-olds each year. This documentary follows them through their lessons and the start of their two years (18 months for women) out in the world looking for people to convert.

Along the way, we learn that the church loves social media and expects missionaries to post 50 updates a day, and that real Mormons can often be found outside The Book of Mormon theatre show in London, looking for people to talk to about their faith. The film doesn't shy away from the church's dubious side – homosexuality is regarded as sinful and gender equality isn't accepted – but it's still hard not to like these clean-cut, bright-eyed missionaries. Their belief that they're doing good is, ironically, rather intoxicating. CERI THOMAS

FA Cup: Fulham v Leeds /Bristol City v Man City

7.30pm BBC1/ITV1

Catch up via iPlayer/ITVX

Bristol City fans will probably have mixed feelings about their FA Cup fifth-round draw. On the one hand they'll have the chance to watch all-conquering Manchester City in the flesh on their home turf at Ashton Gate but, on the other, their own team are the opponents (k/o 8pm ITV1). However, a thrilling EFL Cup semi-final between the two teams in 2018 showed that the Robins won't be there just to make up numbers.

Three other fixtures are also on offer, with Fulham hosting Leeds (k/o 7.45pm BBC1), Brighton travelling to Stoke (k/o 7.15pm ITV4) and Leicester welcoming Blackburn Rovers (k/o 7.30pm BBC red button). MAX COPEMAN

FOOD

Great British Menu

8.00pm BBC2

Catch up via iPlayer

With dishes inspired by DC Thomson characters, Orkney animator Selina Wagner's film Spindrift, cartoon strip Oor Wullie and Edinburgh-born author of The Wind in the Willows Kenneth Grahame, there can be no doubt that it's the turn of the Scottish chefs this week. One – Adam Handling – is back for the third time, while it's a first appearance for the others, including Tunde "Abi" Abifarin, who is out to shake up the GBM kitchen with his Nigerian and pan-African culinary influences.

As always, they must impress the veteran judge – Michelin-starred Tom Aikens – with their vegan starter and fish course if they're to get a chance to cook again in tomorrow's programme. JANE RACKHAM

Food Unwrapped Gets Fruity

8.00pm C4 Catch up via All 4

Jimmy Doherty and his team are not being especially saucy in this edition, so presumably the title is simply a ploy to draw viewers in. And probably pave the way for some fruit-based puns.

As you have probably guessed, fruits are the topic. Kate Quilton investigates why plastic wrapping is used for cucumbers, Briony May Williams finds out how many apples are needed to produce a can of cider, while Matt Tebbutt visits Spain to discover why it is that some oranges are easy peelers and others are not.

Meanwhile, Doherty is in India to find out more about pomegranates – are they really the superfood some believe? JR

The Architecture the Railways Built

8.00pm Yesterday

Catch up via UKTV Play

There's a delightful randomness about The Architecture the Railways Built. Essentially an excuse for railway historian Tim Dunn to visit some stations, what could have been rather niche is made more universal by his enthusiasm ("I do love a signal box") and his winning way with a yarn.

Series four begins and ends on the Forth Bridge, where Dunn tells the tale of the 6.5 million rivets used in its construction and confronts his fear of heights when he reaches the summit. In between, he visits the National Railway Museum in York to discuss the Euston Arch and Goathland – better known to Harry Potter buffs as Hogsmeade. JOHN AIZLEWOOD

The Girl in the Box: the Kidnapping of Stephanie Slater

9pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5

In 1992, extortionist and murderer Michael Sams kidnapped 25-year-old estate agent Stephanie Slater as she showed him around a property in Birmingham, demanding £175,000 for her release. Police detectives set up a covert operation to catch Sams red-handed as he collected the ransom. But how did he evade the 1,000 officers involved? And was he also responsible for a similar crime six months earlier in Leeds?

This gritty two-parter uses a compelling blend of dramatic reconstructions, archive footage and new interviews to delve into a remarkable case. MICHAEL HOGAN

PROPERTY

Home Greek Home

9.00pm More4 Catch up via All 4

Another week, another home renovation show. Designer Sarah Moore has dreamed of living on the Greek island of Skiathos since discovering this Aegean idyll at the age of 17. In this new series, we follow her as she renovates a derelict house using traditional materials. Her ultimate goal: to preserve as much of the house's original character as she can. In episode one, Moore visits it for the first time. She bought this ramshackle property online during one of the Covid lockdowns. Was that a foolhardy whim? A disastrous waste of money? Well, we all know how these shows play out. There will be some ups, and a fair few downs along the way. PAUL WHITELAW

DOCUMENTARY

Sex on Screen: Storyville

10pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

Until the mid-60s, Hollywood movies were governed by a moral code: on-screen kisses were limited to three seconds, unmarried sex was unacceptable, and so on. Since then, films have gone from romance without sex to sex without romance.

With interviewees including Jane Fonda and Rosanna Arquette, this film graphically takes us through every aspect of sex as portrayed on screen. Women talk of sexual harassment and the humiliation of filming nude scenes, and we see how sex scenes are created now (prosthetics, intimacy coaching, etc). The message is clear. Depicting women as sex objects teaches males to treat them as such. JR

THRILLER

The Diplomat 9pm Alibi Full series available via Sky Go/NOW/Virgin Media

Don't be fooled by the Barcelona setting, talk of consuls, and those giant on-screen graphics you get in international thrillers.

This is an old-fashioned whodunnit, albeit one that comes with characters able to speak Catalan, a skill I doubt is on Inspector Barnaby's CV.

Here, it's Laura Simmonds (Sophie Rundle) doing the investigating and stretching what I would guess to be the definition of her job as a diplomat. But then a British barman working on a yacht in the city's marina has died – and the guy's dad isn't buying the explanation that his death was an accident. Hence Laura and colleague Alba (Serena Manteghi) getting involved in the case, a decision that's sure to put them in peril in the weeks ahead.

Gary Lineker introduces coverage of the fifth-round tie from Craven Cottage (kick-off 7.45). Marco Silva's Fulham have been one of the surprise packages of the Premier League and their progression in the FA Cup is another sign of the club's ambitions of playing in a European competition next season. The Cottagers came through a fourth-round replay against Sunderland to reach this stage, winning 3-2.

Leeds have endured a disappointing league campaign and could see this competition as a welcome distraction from their woes. Tonight is the first time they have faced top-flight opposition in the FA Cup this season.

7.30 FA Cup Football

RT Bristol City v Manchester City

Laura Woods presents the fifth-round match from Ashton Gate (kick-off 8.00).

The Championship side face the might of the reigning Premier League champions, as they seek a place in the last eight. The last time the visitors exited the cup at this stage was back in 2018, when they lost 1-0 to third-tier Wigan Athletic. Could there be a similar upset in the West Country tonight, or will Pep Guardiola's talented team march into the quarter-finals? Live coverage of Stoke City v Brighton & Hove Albion is on ITV4 from 6.30pm.

Commentary from Sam Matterface and Ally McCoist, with analysis by Roy Keane and Ian Wright. See page 70.

FILM OF THE DAY

Rain Man ★★★★★ 10.40pm-12.50am BBC1 (starts 11.10pm in N Ireland, 11.20pm Wales) 15

DRAMA While everyone remembers this film about an autistic man as Dustin Hoffman's Oscar-winning triumph, the film equally belongs to Tom Cruise. He plays a fast-talking wheeler-dealer who learns that he's been cut out of his father's will and has a brother confined to an institution. What follows is a classic road movie, as the siblings take off on a cross-country journey to California in an old Buick. Director Barry Levinson handles the whole thing beautifully, and bagged an Oscar for his efforts, while the film itself took the best picture award. ANDREW COLLINS (US 1988, swearing, HD)

Hellfire ★★★★★ 11.40am-1.30pm TCM

WESTERN The lawlessness of a frontier town causes a cardsharp to mend his ways in this lively movie from B-grade studio Republic. Leading man Bill Elliott is too wooden to bring much conviction to his character, but the movie gets a massive jolt when he tangles with Marie Windsor's gun-toting outlaw, who makes Doris Day's Calamity Jane look like Shirley Temple. TREVOR JOHNSTON (US 1949, HD)

Do You Know This Voice? ★★★★★ 2.40-4.15pm Talking Pictures TV PG

MYSTERY Dan Duryea played a lot of hissable villains in his career, and director Frank Nesbitt's masterstroke here is in making it clear from the start that his hospital orderly is behind the kidnapping of a Bristol schoolboy. Adapting the novel by American writer Evelyn Berckman, Nesbitt adeptly blends noir and social realism, and the result is flawed but fascinating. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1964, BW)

The Queen of Spades ★★★★★ 4.15-6.00pm Talking Pictures TV PG

CHILLER Set in Imperial Russia, this is the definitive film version of Pushkin's short story about an army captain who takes on more than he bargained for when he tries to discover the secret of a countess's success at cards. Director Thorold Dickinson creates a handsomely mounted and highly atmospheric ghost story that still chills the blood. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY (UK 1948, BW)

Two Rode Together ★★★★★ 4.45-6.55pm Great Movies Action PG

WESTERN In this rather slow-moving late John Ford western, James Stewart plays a cynical sheriff and Richard Widmark is a gallant cavalry officer who set out to rescue victims of Comanche raids. The leads both seem slightly ill at ease in their underwritten roles, but Elmer Gantry's Shirley Jones and The Alamo's Linda Cristal provide assured support. TONY SLOMAN (US 1961)

Happy Death Day 2U ★★★★★ 9.00-11.00pm Film4 15

HORROR Jessica Rothe reprises her starring role in this underwhelming sequel to the 2017 slasher-thon (see p67). This time, another student opens the lethal loop that sucks Rothe into a parallel dimension of daily death. A warning: it's essential to have watched the first film, otherwise this less frightening iteration will make even less sense. DAVE ALDRIDGE (US 2019, violence, HD)

This Is 40 ★★★★★ 9.00-11.40pm Comedy Central 15

COMEDY Sold as a sort-of sequel to Knocked Up, Judd Apatow's midlife-crisis movie brings back likeable couple Pete (Paul Rudd) and Debbie (Leslie Mann). Apatow regulars Chris O'Dowd, Jason Segel and Melissa McCarthy also feature among the cast, but the surprise is just how sad and honest this all is beneath the scatology and quipping. AC (US 2012, swearing, drug abuse, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

Age of Heroes ★★★★★ 10.50pm-12.40am Great Movies Action 15

WAR The real-life exploits of James Bond creator Ian Fleming are the inspiration for this old-fashioned war yarn. Sean Bean stars as Major Jones, who's sent on a sabotage mission in occupied Norway by intelligence officer Fleming (James D'Arcy). Danny Dyer co-stars as the headstrong corporal who clashes with Jones. DAMON WISE (UK 2011, violence, swearing)

The Motorcycle Diaries ★★★★★ 1.10-3.50am Film4 15

BIOPIC Director Walter Salles's moving, lyrical and funny movie about Che Guevara focuses on the man rather than the myth. Gael García Bernal plays the young Che, as he witnesses social struggles and injustices while on a road trip with a friend in 1952. The experience awakens his political consciousness and seals his future as a revolutionary icon. ALAN JONES (US/UK/Fr 2004, swearing, HD)

WESTERN

Django

9.00pm, 10.05pm Sky Atlantic

NEW SERIES

While also refreshing the genre, Django's intent is to pay homage to its source material, Sergio Corbucci's 1966 spaghetti western of the same name. It succeeds in continuing to be stylish and slick – and it doesn't skimp on the violence – but the plot isn't rehashed, making this Django breathe new life into the character.

In 1870s Texas, cowboy Django (Matthias Schoenaerts) believes his family has been murdered, but discovers that his daughter Sarah (Lisa Vicari) survived and tracks her down to a place called New Babylon. She's about to marry the town's founder, John Ellis (Nicholas Pinnock) – but are Ellis's motives as pure as they appear?

Django is very modern in its approach to portraying people divided. And director Francesca Comencini said that her condition for working on the series was that the women wouldn't be relegated to background roles, and has successfully crafted a female villain, religious gunslinger Elizabeth Thurman (Noomi Rapace), who's a particularly intriguing adversary. LAURA RUTKOWSKI

FA Cup Football

6.30pm ITV4, 7.00pm ITV1, 7.30pm BBC1
Catch up via ITVX/iPlayer

A slightly unusual news cycle preceded one of tonight's fifth-round ties, as Premier League strugglers Southampton announced that the 5,000 visiting fans of opponents Grimsby Town could not bring inflatable fish to the match, only to then reverse the decision. However, if the League Two side are to progress, they'll need more than the support of their mascot, Harry Haddock (k/o 7.15pm ITV4).

Elsewhere, Manchester United host West Ham in perhaps the most box-office fixture (k/o 7.45pm ITV1), while Tottenham travel to Sheffield United (k/o 7.55pm BBC1), who edged past Wrexham last time out. Burnley also meet Fleetwood Town – via the BBC red button. MAX COPEMAN

PROPERTY

Kirstie and Phil's Love It or Leave It: Brilliant Builds

8.00pm C4 Catch up via All 4

In this returning spin-off, property's platonic power couple revisit their most successful refurb. Episode one features Amy and Louis, who spent years agonising over what to do with their home near the market town of Cowbridge. Back in 2020 Kirstie compared it to the Tin Man in The Wizard of Oz, saying, "What this house needs is a heart". Now it has one – but will its occupants love it back?

There are also strong generational bonds in Aylesbury, where Paul and Sophie have tried to extend his "bachelor pad". Expect plenty of renovation tips, as well as excessive repetition of the programme's catchphrase. ORLA THOMAS

NATURE

Secret Life of the Forest

8.00pm Channel 5
Catch up via My5

North Yorkshire's Dalby Forest is in the midst of a heatwave, which the resident beavers are perhaps best placed to endure. They're expert air-conditioning engineers, creating channels of cool water that also benefit their aquatic neighbours. Secret cameras capture the family's industrious nocturnal hours, as well as glimpses of their tiny offspring or "kit".

Easier to spot but no less intriguing is the humble chaffinch, which has a variety of regional dialects and a call to predict rain. It's a pleasure to watch these full-throated Yorkshire songbirds, and to learn about the area's now-thriving population of turtle doves, which is another conservation good news story. OT

ART

Landscape Artist of the Year

8.00pm Sky Arts

LAST EPISODE

Who is Number 1? Today we find out as the three finalists are transported to Portmeirion on a boiling hot day and given the freedom to roam the eccentric townscape. It's a tough task, not helped by the judges demanding, "We don't just want finished paintings – we want three masterpieces."

The pressure takes its toll, with Stephen Mangan so worried about one of the artists, he buys them an ice cream. The finished works are worth the struggle, and the eventual winner is overjoyed. A documentary follows showing their work on the £10,000 prize commission for Royal Museums Greenwich. DAVID CRAWFORD

ALSO ON TODAY

Edge of Darkness

In the second episode, kidnapped Stephanie Slater returns home, giving police vital details about her captor, Michael Sams.

TALENT SHOW

The Piano

9.00pm C4 Catch up via All 4

Part of the joy of this series is seeing which dingy little cupboard they'll shove judges Mika and Lang Lang into, with the popstar and classical pianist squirreled away at stations to spy on amateur ivory-tinklers. By these standards, this week's episode is a bitter disappointment – because at Glasgow's Central Station they get a nice windowed area to sit in.

Still, perhaps it was unavoidable. Central Station sells itself very well as the place to randomly pitch up at a lone piano and start playing, with glorious acoustics and a wide space that make the applause from passers-by ripple like a concert hall audience. It's stirring to watch – perhaps The Piano has finally found its groove.

DOCUMENTARY

Amanda Owen's Farming Lives

LAST EPISODE

The Yorkshire Shepherdess heads to a North Wales farm taking a pioneering approach to environmental sustainability. Llyr Jones inherited the family business aged just 19 and has expanded far beyond arable and livestock, adding a scenic campsite and a hydro power plant that provides all the electricity for the 1,000-acre site. "The Welsh language has been saved by the rural community," says Llyr, while chatting with his three bilingual children over breakfast. Much like The Archers, this series has been a winning mix of personal stories and insights into agricultural life, while highlighting broader cultural issues. OT

The Billionaires Who Made Our World: Mark Zuckerberg

10.00pm C4 Catch up via All 4

Creating Facebook made Harvard drop-out Mark Elliot Zuckerberg a billionaire by the tender age of 23. But what do we really know about him? Fuelled by Oscar winning-film The Social Network, he is often seen as an emotionless geek prepared to sacrifice anything to succeed. This film talks to those who know him well, yet far scarier are the questions about Facebook's effect on the world.

How much has it profited from the spread of misinformation? Did it skew the results of everything from presidential elections to the Brexit referendum? And does Zuckerberg even really care? CERI THOMAS

DOCUMENTARY

Saving Lives in Leeds

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

NEW SERIES

It's not just the extraordinary procedures carried out at Leeds Teaching Hospitals NHS

Trust that makes this new series about doctors and surgeons fascinating, but the insight into their daily fight to find free beds.

While the battle for space might be old news, seeing prepped surgeons having to cancel long-awaited operations at the last minute, or having to make impossible decisions of who most deserves a post-op bed is sobering. In the plastic surgery department, the wait list is 555 people long. Fortunately for 38-year-old Jamie, a single dad of twins who lost his limbs after a massive electric shock, the right donor has turned up after a two-year wait. Professor Simon Kay and a team of 40 perform a complex and high-risk double hand and forearm transplant, but will it be a success? KAY RIBEIRO

FILM OF THE DAY

The Godfather ★★★★★ 15

9.00pm Film4

Kicking off three nights devoted to Francis Ford Coppola and Mario Puzo's epic gangster trilogy is the classic original, in which Marlon Brando's softly spoken Don Vito Corleone (above) deals with simmering trouble between New York's Mafia families. (1972)

The Godfather ★★★★★

9.00pm-12.35am Film4

15

CRIME DRAMA This elegiac organised-crime saga from Francis Ford Coppola is an all-time high watermark of American cinema. It also proves that an intelligent, sometimes slow-moving drama with impeccable artistic credentials can become a mainstream hit. Beginning after the Second World War, it traces the handover of power within the Corleone family, from the old-world values of Don Vito (Marlon Brando) to his son, the "white sheep" Michael (Al Pacino). The trilogy plays out on Film4 over the coming nights.

BROKEN ARROW ★★★★★ 2.05-4.00pm 5 Action PG

WESTERN Director Delmer Daves's influential western was among the first to tell the Native American side of the story. James Stewart heads the cast as a scout who falls for Apache maiden Debra Paget while on a mission to negotiate a truce. Jeff Chandler became a star following his performance as Cochise, a role he reprised twice. TONY SLOMAN (US 1950)

Appointment with Danger ★★★★★ 2.40-4.30pm Film4

FILM NOIR This nifty B-movie finds Alan Ladd working for the Post Office's detective branch, tracking down the murderers of a colleague and foiling a robbery by posing as a corrupt cop. Phyllis Calvert plays a nun on the run who witnessed the murder. It's moodily shot by cameraman John F. Seitz and smartly directed by Lewis Allen. ADRIAN TURNER (US 1950, BW, HD)

Lawrence of Arabia ★★★★★

4.40-9.00pm

Great Movies PG

EPIC David Lean directs this magisterial portrayal of one of Britain's most enigmatic yet charismatic heroes, TE Lawrence. Lean creates some awesomely beautiful desert images, while Peter

Alien ★★★★★

10.00pm-12.20am ITV4 18

SCI-FI Ridley Scott directs the original "haunted house in space" thrill-ride. Sigourney Weaver's breakthrough performance as Ripley deserves special mention, as does the alien design from Swiss artist HR Giger. Scott brilliantly alternates false scares with genuine jolts, creating a seamless blend of gothic horror and science fiction. ALAN JONES (US/UK 1979, violence, swearing, HD)

Captain America: the Winter Soldier ★★★★★

(starts 11.00pm in Wales, 11.40pm in N Ireland)

ACTION Chris Evans returns in his second solo outing as Steve Rogers/Captain America, joining Scarlett Johansson's Black Widow and Anthony Mackie's Falcon to take on a mysterious assassin. The story plays like an old-school political thriller, and the character interplay, astute direction and strong emotional themes make it compelling viewing. AJ (US 2014, violence, HD)

THRILLER In June 1976, an Air France Airbus was hijacked by pro-Palestinian terrorists and flown to Uganda, where 106 passengers – many of them Israelis – were used as a political bargaining chip. This is a decent history lesson from director/producer José Padilha, with Daniel Brühl and Rosamund Pike excellent as the conflicted hijackers. AC (US/UK 2018, violence, swearing, HD)

Stephen Fry: Willem and Frieda – Defying the Nazis

9.00pm C4 Catch up via All 4

Dutch pair Willem Arondeus and Frieda Belinfante are not household names, even in their own country, but they should be because they saved thousands of Jews from Hitler's death camps. Having learnt of their heroic exploits, Stephen Fry was determined to bring their story of defiance to a wider audience.

His engrossing documentary reveals what extraordinary people they were. Willem was an openly gay artist, while Frieda was a lesbian cellist, so they were already part of Hitler's hated minorities. They met because, despite the dangers, both were forging identity documents for their Jewish friends after the Germans invaded the Netherlands in 1940. In a 1990s interview Frieda calmly describes the massive risk she took to raise funds for their resistance work and how they later blew up the Population Registry office.

"I'm in awe of them... not so much their skills but because they were prepared to put their lives in danger for the sake of people they didn't know," says Fry. JANE RACKHAM

Build Your Dream Home in the Country

7.00pm Channel 5
Catch up via My5

A 200-year-old miner's cottage in the Forest of Dean may seem a romantic first home for a young couple escaping London, but Rob and Becky are struggling with buyer's remorse. Their property turns out to be, in Mark Millar's words, "a money pit" with a serious damp problem.

Stripping the render so the house can breathe is the first in a long list of jobs, but with a tiny budget and both occupants working full time, progress is slow. "I don't think we appreciated how long things would take – and how hard it would be," says Becky, ruefully applying sealant to some reclaimed floor tiles. Even with the help of handy friends, will their graft pay off? ORLA THOMAS

Dragons' Den

8.00pm BBC1
Catch up via iPlayer

When brothers Damian and Sebastian roar into the Den with their biking gear business idea, they do something very unusual. They make the place go completely quiet as the Dragons mull over whether to speak up and make an offer. "This is like a game of chess," smiles Steven Bartlett, although Peter Jones and Sara Davies are too busy looking cool in their shades, baseball hats and leather jackets.

However, Touker Suleyman seems to be in an aggressive mood – some would say downright rude. "What do you take us for?" he snorts when he hears one entrepreneur's valuation. Although there are a few hilarious moments when an entrepreneur called Peta comes in. JR

The Apprentice

9.00pm BBC1
Catch up via iPlayer

A shock double firing is always delicious, so don't miss this week's tasty boardroom showdown. The remaining candidates' latest task in the besuited business contest is to design a new men's skincare product, before pitching it to industry buyers. May we suggest an under-eye cream to counteract all those 5am alarm calls? For one team, a dispute over ingredients leads to disastrous skin-staining gunk, but a distinct lack of creativity on the rival team results in an unoriginal concept.

Back at HQ, Lord Sugar – hardly a man who looks like a moisturising metrosexual – decides to cleanse himself of not just one candidate but two. With regret, pack your washbags and go. MICHAEL HOGAN

Into the Grand Canyon with Nick Knowles

9.00pm Channel 5
Catch up via My5

"Life is all about having adventures," announces Nick Knowles, although not many of us make TV shows about them, too.

Constantly muttering "This is horrible" (because his Grand Canyon exploration often involves heights – and he's terrified of them), he plucks up the courage to try a high-speed zip wire experience, play an injured walker for the mountain rescue team and walk over a glass bridge suspended over the edge of the canyon. Coming down to earth, he hikes the canyon floor, spends the night in spectacular underground caverns and releases a Condor back into the wild. Quite an adventure. Continues tomorrow. JR

COMEDY DRAMA

Funny Woman9.00pm Sky Max

Catch up via Sky Go/Now

After witnessing the knowing asides of Frankie Howerd, we see Barbara (Gemma Arterton) wondering whether she too would be able to break the fourth wall that separates performers from their audience. A sly wink here, a nod to camera there – surely that won't collapse the world of her hit situation comedy?

The trouble is, lines are also being blurred elsewhere, with on-screen love interest Clive (Tom Bateman) now a part of Barbara's personal life, too. And as we reach the mid-point of this zesty story, we're about to see how the changing mores of the 1960s impact on that relationship with her co-star – and the one Barbara has with her public. DAVID BROWN

DRAMA

Murdoch Mysteries9.00pm Alibi

Catch up via Sky Go/Now

Making his one-episode-per-season guest appearance tonight is honey-voiced spymaster Terrence Meyers (Peter Keleghan). His main skill? Explaining the most ridiculous of plotlines with the straightest of faces. In this instance, it's one that wouldn't have looked out of place in The Avengers back in the 1960s, as it involves a mad science experiment, an attempt at political assassination and heroes being tied to chairs with rope by an eye-patched villain.

But when it comes to daft dialogue, it's Murdoch who takes top prize with: "We have Alexander Graham Bell doing the calculations as we speak." It's all nonsense, but where else can you hear glorious lines like that? DB

DOCUMENTARY

Anorexic10.00pm Channel 5

Catch up via My5

This documentary comes with a warning that it's likely to cause distress – and rightly so. It's incredibly tough to see the devastation of anorexia, which leads to more deaths than any other psychiatric disorder. The programme follows three young women at very different stages in their battle against the illness, each knowing they risk dying, but equally unable to change their behaviour. While 19-year-old Lottie has seemingly lost the will to fight, 21-year-old Emily rages against her condition, but also at the weight she has reluctantly gained. Your heart breaks for them – and for their mothers, who watch helplessly as they harm themselves. KAY RIBEIRO

DOCUMENTARY

Murder in the Pacific9.00pm BBC2 All episodes available today on iPlayerNEW SERIES

On 10 July 1985, Greenpeace's flagship Rainbow Warrior was anchored in Auckland Harbour prior to setting off to protest France's planned nuclear testing in the Pacific. But, while many of the crew were sleeping, a bomb exploded. In less than a minute the ship had sunk and its photographer, Fernando Pereira, drowned. We now know that the French government were responsible.

This thorough three-part documentary about the shocking incident starts by introducing us to the crew who describe life on board and the contamination (to both land and to people) they'd seen caused by US nuclear testing at a nearby atoll. But it also focuses on the activists' determination to highlight the issues that governments – including, I'm sorry to say, the UK's – shrugged off. JR

8.00 Dragons' Den

RT 9/14. As the lift doors open to more hopeful entrepreneurs, business tycoons Peter Jones, Deborah Meaden, Touker Suleyman, Sara Davies and Steven Bartlett are on hand to assess the ideas on offer. Tonight, two brothers ride into the Den with their motorcycle clothing brand. Also hoping to rev up the Dragons' desire to invest are a matcha-based energy drink company and the person behind a nail polish brand. And they've all got competition from a DIY tool that promises to provide measurements like no other and a multipurpose keyring. See page 90.

Series producer Julie Grant
Executive producer Samantha Davies (S) (AD) (HD)

9.00 The Apprentice

RT 9/12. The candidates are tasked with designing a new men's skincare product, before pitching it to industry buyers. For one team, wrangling over a recipe leads to a disastrous skin-staining goo, while a total lack of creativity on the other team results in a concept which is far from being original. In the boardroom, Lord Sugar decides to wash his hands of one candidate, but then there's a shock in store... You're Fired follows on BBC2. See page 90.

Howards End ★★★★★ 3.55-6.45pm Film4 PG

DRAMA Director James Ivory's adaptation of EM Forster's novel has an elegance that never hides its grim insights into the upper middle classes. Patriarchal Vanessa Redgrave dies after writing a letter bequeathing her country home, Howards End, to new friend Emma Thompson. But the note is destroyed by the family snobs, whose head (Anthony Hopkins) then falls in love with Thompson. Meanwhile, lowly clerk Samuel West's life is altered by the attentions of Thompson's sister (Helena Bonham Carter). Thompson talks to Radio Times about her current viewing on p146. TOM HUTCHINSON (UK 1992, HD)

A Town Like Alice ★★★★★ 1.25-3.55pm Film4 PG

WAR Nevil Shute's novel receives an earnest screen adaptation here, as it portrays the hardships faced by women route-marched across Malaya by the invading Japanese. The romance between Virginia McKenna and Peter Finch brings relief from the trials of the trek, while Takagi gives a notable performance as a sympathetic guard. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1956, BW, HD)

Damn the Defiant! ★★★★★ 2.00-4.05pm 5 Action PG

ADVENTURE Director Lewis Gilbert's seafaring tale benefits immensely from the playing of Dirk Bogarde, Alec Guinness and Anthony Quayle, all of whom are clearly enjoying themselves as they swash buckles in the Napoleonic wars. It's hard to keep your eyes off the young Bogarde, who's absolutely splendid as a demented martinet. TONY SLOMAN (UK 1962, edited for violence)

Green for Danger ★★★★★ 4.55-6.45pm Talking Pictures TV PG

COMEDY This brisk and engaging murder mystery is filled with a deliciously dark wit by director Sidney Gilliat. He gets the best out of the incomparable Alastair Sim, playing the eccentric Scotland Yard inspector investigating the murder of a patient on the operating table. Leo Genn also makes his mark as the womanising surgeon who is one of Sim's five suspects. DP (UK 1946, BW)

"Crocodile" Dundee II ★★★★★ 6.45-9.00pm Film4 PG

ADVENTURE After the first movie was a massive hit, Paul Hogan returned as Mick "Crocodile" Dundee for this sequel. The story attempts to blend the comedy of the original with the kind of rescue adventure that was already old hat in the long-gone days of the serial. But Hogan is as amiable as before and there are funny moments to be had. JOHN MARRIOTT (US/Aus 1988, edited for content, HD)

Diamonds Are Forever ★★★★★ 9.00-11.30pm ITV4 12

SPY After You Only Live Twice, Sean Connery said "Never again" to playing 007, but after George Lazenby's sole effort in OHMS he was lured back with a $1 million fee. The result is one of the weakest James Bond movies, with Connery simply going through the motions of a plot involving a diamond-smuggling operation. ADRIAN TURNER (UK 1971, violence, nudity, HD)

The Godfather Part II ★★★★★

9.00pm-1.05am Film4 15

CRIME This masterful sequel from Francis Ford Coppola presents an America born of immigrant idealism and dying of corruption. Breathtaking in scope, it uses flashbacks to portray the early life of Vito Corleone (Robert De Niro) after he flees Sicily for New York. Meanwhile, in the 1950s, Vito's son Michael tries to legitimise the family business – using all the violent means at his disposal. The saga concludes tomorrow. AT (US 1974, violence, swearing, HD)

End of Watch ★★★★★

10.45pm-12.25am BBC3 15

POLICE David Ayer's thriller sees cops Michael Peña and Jake Gyllenhaal stumble on the activities of a Mexican drug cartel. Shot almost wholly on handheld cameras, the movie is appealingly acted and well directed. The characterisation is more perfunctory, with the LAPD painted as spotless saints and the criminals sketched as barely human. ADAM SMITH (US 2012, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

Cry of the City ★★★★★

11.50pm-1.40am Talking Pictures TV 12

FILM NOIR One of the most uncompromising examples from a great period of 20th Century-Fox crime movies, this is an emotive study of the relationship between two former boyhood pals, one of whom is a gangster (Richard Conte) and the other a cop (Victor Mature). Director Robert Siodmak keeps it tough and exciting throughout. TS (US 1948, violence, BW)

Friday

EX APPEAL
Martha (Sally Bretton) is thrown when her former fiancé Archie (Jamie Bamber) turns up

DRAMA

Beyond Paradise 8.00pm (8.30pm in Wales) BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

In what must be a television first, we have two dramas tonight that appear to have been inspired by Hollyoaks (no, really, bear with me). First, there's the sexual consent storyline in Coronation Street (see right), covered with Ellie Nightingale in 2016, then here in Beyond Paradise we have an entire family disappearing mid-meal with food still on the table, a fate that befell the Osbornes, again in 2016.

Not that I'm in any way making accusations of plagiarism. After all, 2016 was also the year that former Dallas star Linda Gray made her debut on the Channel 4 soap, and this cosy crime drama doesn't boast guest stars of quite that calibre.

That said, tonight's episode does feature Battlestar Galactica's Jamie Bamber as a rent-a-hunk former fiancé of Martha, whom Humph feels threatened by. And there's also the late Ruth Madoc making her last screen appearance as a concerned relative of the missing clan who offers the detective a huge great wedge of cake that could easily have doubled as a murder weapon. Before you start getting ideas, it doesn't. DAVID BROWN

GARDENING

Gardeners' World

8.00pm (8.30pm in N Ireland; not Wales) BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

In the third of four compilations, Advolly Richmond visits Dollar in Clackmannanshire to see the magnificent Japanese garden at Cowden, created at the turn of the 20th century by designer Taki Handa.

Meanwhile, back in spring, Monty Don decided to try growing loofahs for the first time. He said it was going to be a journey of discovery, and the result, as we discovered in October, was a lot of potential bath-related Christmas presents for his friends.

We are also reminded of some more exotic planting that we saw in kitchen gardener Rekha Mistry's allotment, which boasts a curious array of vegetables. JANE RACKHAM

SOAP

Coronation Street

8.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

Some people gravitate towards Corrie for the light comedy, others (perhaps younger fans) appreciate its moments of melodrama. But when the plotlines get too dour, you'll often find objections being made.

So it will be interesting to see what viewers make of tonight's storyline tackling consent. Aaron will be seen making the decision for him and Amy to have sex after the pair have had too much to drink. But the morning after the night before, Amy is set to question if she was able to voice her assent. It's a topic of undoubted relevance, but whether it suits the tastes of the soap's traditional audience remains to be seen. DB

PANEL SHOW

QI 9.00pm (9.30pm in N Ireland & Wales) BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer
Compilation episodes can sometimes feel like a futile attempt to keep the party going when the booze has run out. However, such is the quality of the comic talent on QI that this second collection of best bits from the most recent series – themed around "T" – feels like someone has turned up with a new bottle of something fresh and fizzy.

Highlights include Bill Bailey doing a routine about touchy-feely waiters, Jo Brand telling a particularly blue joke about the Eiffel Tower, Alan Davies seemingly losing his mind in a riff about horse races, and Nish Kumar giving an impassioned talk about the correct way to hang toilet roll on the holder. STEPHEN KELLY

ALSO ON TODAY

Gogglebox

9.00pm C4

Giles and Mary (pictured with their Tibetan spaniel Merlin) and their fellow armchair critics offer their opinions on the past week's television.

The Graham Norton Show

10.40pm BBC1

Taylor Swift, Daniel Craig and Bono are among the guests in this compilation from the most recent series.

DOCUMENTARY

Secrets of Neuschwanstein Castle

9.00pm National Geographic

If it seemed as though Dick and Angel Strawbridge had taken on a mammoth project renovating their French château, spare a thought for the custodians of Germany's Neuschwanstein Castle. At an estimated cost of more than €20 million, King Ludwig II of Bavaria's famous former home has undergone a huge refurbishment – and cameras have captured the painstaking restoration.

The craftsmanship is incredible, which is more than can be said for the dubbing of the contributors, but try to see (or hear?) past that to the fascinating finds and details unearthed.

FRANCES TAYLOR

MUSIC

Guy Garvey: from the Vaults

10.15pm Sky Arts

Catch up via Sky Go/Now
More gold dust from the provincial pop archives, this week going back to 1984. And what was on offer largely subverted Orwell's predictions, with the exception of Frankie Goes to Hollywood's portentous Two Tribes. An early outing for the song at an outdoor swimming pool slightly diminishes its grandeur.

But the real treats here are the small performances: John Martyn and Robert Palmer teaming up for the lovely Fisherman's Dream; a gauche but gifted Roddy Frame giving an off-the-cuff Down the Dip. Also the rare, post-transmission mini gigs for patient audiences. And two pre-fame blokes chatting: Ben Elton to Shane MacGowan. MARK BRAXTON

FACTUAL

Couples Therapy

11.05pm, 11.30pm BBC2

Full series available on iPlayer

One of the most interesting things about this series is hearing Dr Orna Guralnik discuss her clients with her mentor Virginia Goldner before then switching to the couple's session and, as is the case tonight with Josh and Molly, showing they were spot on.

Guralnik gently shepherds the couples through their emotional problems but occasionally – as with Ping in the first of tonight's episodes – she snaps. "Abusing each other is not therapy," she tells her sharply. "What you're doing is destructive!" In the second episode, Ping seems to have taken that comment on board, while India and Dale relive an argument that highlights their issues over disagreement and anger. JR

RIVIERA MYSTERY

Jack (Adam James) causes a commotion when he discovers a painting is missing

DRAMA

Hotel Portofino

9.00pm ITV1 Full series available on ITVX Premium

Dearie me, this will never do. It is only seven o'clock in the morning in 1920s Portofino and already one of the hotel's guests – tennis player Pelham "Plum" Wingfield (Dominic Tighe) – has inexplicably rushed off, Vincenzo Danioni (Pasquale Esposito) has arrived with a health inspector intent on closing down the hotel for unhygienic practices, and Jack Turner (Adam James) has hurtled down the stairs (in his pyjamas, no less) yelling that the "authentic Rubens" belonging to Cecil (Mark Umbers) is missing and hurling around accusations like a man possessed. All this before breakfast has been served.

Despite scandals, intrigues and outrages that are worthy of an Agatha Christie mystery (albeit without a murder), the sun is beating down on this glorious corner of Italy, so it still looks flipping gorgeous. JR

FILM OF THE DAY

The Rock ★★★★★ 10.45pm-1.10am ITV1 15

ACTION This satisfying blockbuster cemented Nicolas Cage's status as an unlikely action hero. He plays a chemical weapons expert who is called in to help after disenchanting general Ed Harris and his marines take over Alcatraz and train poison-gas rockets on San Francisco. Cage is teamed with Sean Connery's former SAS man, the only person to have ever escaped the island prison. Director Michael Bay's boyish enthusiasm for outlandish stunts is contagious and even cynical viewers will find it difficult not to feel a giddy rush of adrenaline during the slick set pieces. JOHN FERGUSON (US 1996, violence, swearing, a sex scene, HD)

Flame of the Barbary Coast ★★★★★

2.05-4.00pm 5 Action U

WESTERN John Wayne excels here as a cattleman competing with slimy Joseph Schildkraut for the attentions of Ann Dvorak. The low budget is evident in the ropey old stock shots and inadequate sets, though the production received Oscar nominations for its sound and score. TONY SLOMAN (US 1945, BW, HD)

The Desperate Hours ★★★★★

3.25-5.45pm TCM PG

THRILLER Superbly directed by William Wyler, this searing drama features the last great villainous performance of Humphrey Bogart, playing an escaped convict holding Fredric March and his family hostage in their own home. The tension is unbearable, as March summons up hidden strengths to protect his loved one. TS (US 1955, BW)

Rat Race ★★★★★

6.50-9.00pm Film4 12

COMEDY Fans of It's a Mad Mad Mad Mad World will enjoy this infectiously silly film. John Cleese plays a casino owner who arranges an unusual bet for his gambling pals: the outcome of a race to a locker that contains

$2 million. The cast, including Whoopi Goldberg, Rowan Atkinson and Seth Green, ensures the chase is a whole load of fun. JOANNA BERRY (US/Can 2001, edited for language, HD)

Instant Family ★★★★★

9.00-11.20pm E4 12

DRAMA Mark Wahlberg flexes his comedy chops rather than his muscles in a film that stems from the real-life adoption experiences of its director, Sean Anders. Wahlberg and Rose Byrne play a married couple who decide to foster one child and wind up with three. It's a touch saccharine, but overall a feel-good treat. DAVE ALDRIDGE (US 2018, swearing, HD)

The Godfather, Coda: the Death of Michael Corleone ★★★★★

9.00pm-12.15am Film4 15

CRIME Francis Ford Coppola's recut of The Godfather Part III is a notable improvement on the patchy original. Character motives are more clearly defined, and even that infamous Sofia Coppola performance works better. From a rejigged opening that sees Al Pacino's ageing don negotiating with the Vatican bank, to a far more ferocious Sicilian climax, this is worth revisiting. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1990/2020, violence, swearing, HD)

Kick-Ass ★★★★★

10.00-11.50pm BBC3 15

ACTION This adaptation of Mark Millar's graphic novel follows the exploits of a nerd (Aaron Johnson) who tries to reinvent himself as a real-life superhero. Help comes in the form of Big Daddy (Nicolas Cage) and 11-year-old Hit Girl (Chloë Grace Moretz), who are looking to bring down a Mob boss (Mark Strong). The cartoonish violence speeds towards a manic action climax. ALAN JONES (US/UK 2009, violence, swearing, a sex scene, nudity, drug abuse, HD)

The Devil Commands ★★★★★

11.00pm-12.20am

Talking Pictures TV PG

HORROR Boris Karloff has fun in one of the weirdest movies he made, playing an unhinged scientist trying to communicate with the dead. Although underrated on its release, time has been kind to Edward Dmytryk's macabre film. The quaint surrealist touches of wired-up corpses in diving suits give it a quirky atmosphere, while Anne Revere's evil spiritualist adds extra chills. AJ (US 1941, violence, BW)

Pain and Glory ★★★★★

11.55pm-1.45am BBC2 15

DRAMA A middle-aged director looks back on his life in this Oscar-nominated film from Spanish auteur Pedro Almodóvar. Antonio Banderas is incredibly moving as the lonely maverick who rebuilds his friendship with a former leading man. The result is a subtle, highly mature work. Followed by Almodóvar's striking short film The Human Voice, starring Tilda Swinton. TREVOR JOHNSTON (Sp 2019, swearing, nudity, drug abuse, HD)

OSCAR TRAILBLAZER

Muriel Box was Britain's best and most prolific female film director – so why have you never heard of her, asks Matthew Sweet

Sunday Feature: Carol and Muriel
Sunday 6.45pm Radio 3

LET ME MAKE a prediction. I think I know what you'll say when you get to the end of the next paragraph.

This article is about a railwayman's daughter from Surbiton who founded a feminist publishing imprint, co-wrote nearly 40 stage plays and died a Baroness. She was also a film-maker. In 1946 she became the first woman to win the best original screenplay Oscar. When the British Film Institute last crunched the figures, The Seventh Veil, a psychological thriller starring James Mason and Ann Todd, came out as the tenth biggest film in British box office history. Another stat: Muriel Box (1905–1991) remains this country's most prolific female film director. So I suspect you're now asking yourself, why have I never heard of her?

It's a question that preoccupies one of her successors, Carol Morley, best known for making The Falling (2014), in which Maisie Williams and Florence Pugh succumb to a mysterious fainting epidemic at a 1960s girls school. In this week's Radio 3 Sunday Feature, Morley surveys Box's eclectic back catalogue and asks how the director became a missing person. "We should have a blue heritage plaque," she says. "It's crazy that there isn't one. There should be a book. A documentary. Remakes! A biopic. And a box set."

What would be in it? How about Simon and Laura (1955), a fizzingly postmodern comedy about a pair of unhappily married actors who pretend to adore each to secure their own daily scripted reality show on the BBC? Or The Passionate Stranger (1957), which moves between colour and black and white to tell the story of an Italian chauffeur who mistakenly believes his employer has the hots for him? Or Street Corner (1953), a multi-plotted drama in which female police officers bust illegal drinking dens, save teenage girls from coercive spivs and pluck neglected toddlers from window ledges? Or Morley's personal favourite, The Truth about Women (1957), a sumptuously shot account of 20th-century feminism conveyed through the romantic reminiscences of a middle-aged man? It would be big, the Box box set. Not a bad way to spend International Women's Day.

BUT IT'S NOT COMING any time soon. Although Box has been celebrated with retrospectives in France and Spain, a season at the BFI in May will be the first ever staged on these shores. "It's a collective shame," says Morley, puzzling over the omission. "All of us could have done more." And she does not exempt herself from this.

In her student days in the late 80s, Morley was asked by a German director to film an interview with a subject she hadn't heard of. "All I knew was that she was called Lady Gardiner and had been a film-maker back in the day."

But when they rolled up at the house in Mill Hill in north London they were told she was too ill to participate. "So I filmed the director walking up to the door, knocking on it and no one replying, so that she had something to show the people who had given her the grant to make the film."

Now, of course, Morley knows that this was a missed encounter with Muriel Box, and the house in Mill Hill was the model for the home of the protagonists of Simon and Laura.

Morley's programme contains an even more heartbreaking story. It's told by Karen Peplow, who met Box in the 1980s when intending to write a student dissertation on her films. She never finished it, and you can hear the guilt in her voice as she describes how her project failed. The tutor of her film studies course told her that Muriel Box wasn't worthy of study because she "only got to direct films because of her husband".

That husband, Sydney Box, was head of Gainsborough Studios. His sister, Betty Box, was another big noise in the movies, having produced the seven-film series that began with the 1954 Dirk Bogarde vehicle Doctor in the House. Some journalists have muddled the identities of the two women – another reason why Muriel failed to secure her position in the cultural memory, which the broader prejudices of British film culture did nothing to remedy.

WHEN MURIEL BOX MADE HER last picture, Rattle of a Simple Man (1964), critics, besotted with auteur theory, were constructing an exclusively male canon of great directors. They were also more or less in agreement with Francois Truffaut's snarky remark to Alfred Hitchcock that there was "a certain incompatibility between the terms 'cinema' and Britain". A sad story from late in Box's life tells of how she greeted Sir Richard Attenborough at an Oscar winners reunion party, but he entirely failed to recognise her.

Although Box didn't seem to mind if her grandchildren used her Academy Award in games of bowling, she was concerned with her legacy. In the 1970s she wrote a memoir, Odd Woman Out, detailing the pains and the triumphs of her movie career, plus the complexities of her personal life. (Her interest in abusive relationships, it seems, may have its origins in her parents' miserable and sometimes violent marriage.)

She also kept an extensive personal archive. In Morley's documentary, she is handed a box of materials unopened since Muriel's death. Inside is a stack of photographs, but they're not casual snaps. They are a series of fine studio portraits in which Muriel Box looks stylish, serious and ready to embrace a reputation that, at last, may be about to materialise.

PICK OF THE WEEK

My Cousin, Regime Changer Tuesday 11.00am Radio 4

In the UK, the catalyst of the invasion of Iraq in 2003 is understandably remembered as the "sexed-up" intelligence dossier about weapons of mass destruction. But there's a vast hinterland to that controversy, which journalist Selma Chalabi explores in this engrossing documentary intertwining the personal and political.

Chalabi's second cousin once removed was Ahmed Chalabi, the leader of the Iraqi National Congress, who is widely thought to have helped drive the US towards removing Saddam Hussein.

As Selma explores how her distant relative came to wield such influence in Washington, it's said he retained a child's view of Iraq as a land of plenty from before the 1958 revolution that forced his wealthy family from the country, to which he wished to return – ignoring the poverty and repression of that time. Her father considers him a traitor for the invasion's damage on Iraq.

It's a tale of hubris, full of CIA dealings and background machinations, to which all students of global politics should listen.

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

Freddie's shaking things up at Lower Loxley, as he and Noluthando set about engaging some young recruits. Neil and Chelsea are keen, but there may be a misunderstanding about what's involved.

Over at The Laurels, Ben starts work, but it's not smooth sailing. Alan is feeling the nerves, too, as he considers a fresh challenge, and Kate could also do with some help as she prepares for her big public speaking engagement.

Finally, Brian faces a quandary that reminds him of Jenny. In a moment of private reflection, will he finally let his guard drop? CAROLINE FROST

A LIFE WITH MUSIC

A CLASSICAL COUPLE

Joanna Lumley and her composer husband Stephen Barlow pit Mozart against Beethoven

Mozart was born before Beethoven. Beethoven would have been aware of Mozart's music, might have got hold of a manuscript of one of his compositions (not always easy back then because paper was so expensive) and may even have heard his music performed.

Mozart was a pro rather than a precious. In the days when he was knocking out a cantata every week to order, the ink on the manuscripts would rarely have the chance to dry. He wrote music fit for angels while working like the very devil. He could even compose on coach journeys over the Alps. Hear the whole piece in his head, then write it down. The one thing Wolfgang didn't do was agonise. Unlike Beethoven. He had the weight of the world on his shoulders and frequently wrote music that sounded like it.

Joanna Lumley recalls listening to Ludwig's Pastoral Symphony on a wind-up gramophone while growing up in the Far East. Which is why he remains her favourite. These days she's married to Stephen Barlow, who favours Mozart. He's a conductor and the notion behind

'She's never afraid to ask the question in the back of the listener's mind'

Joanna and the Maestro is that it's a continuation of an after-dinner conversation about music in their home, and one edition is devoted to the relative merits of the two geniuses.

It works, and works resoundingly well, because they're both really good communicators. He has an eye and an ear for the details, like those in the first paragraph, which bring the stories of the composers and their historical context to life; she knows how to maintain the energy and is never ever afraid to ask the question that's in the back of the listener's mind.

Such as the whole podcast devoted to the question of What Does a Conductor Do? This covers everything from the question of musical interpretation to the simple practicalities of the white mark they make you stand on before the door opens to reveal you at Covent Garden. In addition, it isn't afraid to wander into the apocryphal stories about conductors who suddenly found themselves looking at the wrong score and sprinkle a few thoughts on the fabled obstreperousness of the brass section.

It's impeccably produced, edited in such a manner that you won't spot the joins, and enhanced by snatches of music to illustrate the points being made. Highly recommended.

Joanna Lumley stars in Conversations from a Long Marriage (Wednesday 6.30pm Radio 4)

SHOW OF THE WEEK

JOANNA AND THE MAESTRO

Joanna Lumley and her husband Stephen Barlow (a composer and conductor) host a podcast in which they invite us to enter their home for a journey into their shared love of music. In editions so far, they explore what a conductor actually does, present a battle of the giants (Mozart and Beethoven) and lift the lid on Puccini's operas.

OTHER CLASSICAL PODCASTS

CHARLIE HIGSON AND FRIENDS

You may know him from comedy shows such as The Fast Show or for his time in the chart-grazing Higsons. You may not know that he is also a devotee of classical music and here he invites chuckle brothers and sisters such as Harry Enfield and Lucy Porter along to intersperse talk of their careers with a sprinkling of their classical favourites.

STICKY NOTES: THE CLASSICAL MUSIC PODCAST

If you happen to be on the membership platform Patreon and a supporter of Joshua Weilerstein, he'll dedicate the next instalment of his personal introduction to classical music to you. Weilerstein is still an up-and-comer in the world of conductors, but you have to give him maximum points for using podcasts as a way to broadcast his passion, while also heightening his profile.

CLASSICAL FIX

Radio 3 series in which presenter Linton Stephens mixes up some classical medicine for food critics, comedians, weathermen and other non-musical types from elsewhere in the BBC schedules.

ATTENTION TO DETAIL

This takes an interesting approach to helping people into unfamiliar music by drawing the listener's attention to the devices that composers use to achieve particular effects. Thus you get episodes devoted to just one scene in The Magic Flute, how third movements work and the importance of silence in music.

SOMETHING NEW

CAPTAINS WITH SAM WARBURTON

Former Wales rugby union captain Sam Warburton begins his tour of people who have worn the skipper's armband with Chris Robshaw, who headed up Eddie Jones's first England rebuild; Heather Knight, who led England to the cricket World Cup; and Wes Morgan, who led Leicester City to the most unexpected Premier League title back in 2016.

GREG FOOT

Bring me your consumer queries – I'll test them out

I can't be the only one who feels they're constantly being bombarded by new products promising to make me healthier, happier or greener? An "anti-ageing face cream" in a TV ad break. "Booze without the hangover" when I scroll through social media. A "mattress that will help you sleep better", promoted by my favourite podcaster.

There are countless "wonder-products" promising us the world. I'd bet you've seen one this week. Maybe even today.

And do you succumb to your curiosity and its promise? Do you follow the link the friendly podcast host gave you for 25% off a "brain-boosting" supplement? Do you pay a little more for the "health-promoting" manuka honey at the supermarket? Do you switch to natural deodorant to "help the planet" and your underarms? If you do, you're not alone.

However, the next time you see an ad-hyped product or trending fad, before you click "buy", send it to me. In my weekly BBC Radio 4 show and podcast Sliced Bread, I investigate these wonder-products to find out if they are indeed "the best thing since sliced bread" or a case of marketing BS.

Each week I focus on a new, listener-suggested product, weeding out facts from hype, through interviews with experts, research analysis, and trying them for myself. Then, at the end of the episode, I catch up with the listener, results in hand, so they can decide whether they think the product is for them.

'Sally wanted to know if an air fryer really would save her money'

Our most-listened-to investigation last year was on air fryers. Listener Sally wanted to know if switching from her fan oven to an air fryer could save her money. Top line? There are some caveats but, in our tests, cooking in an air fryer used less than half of the energy required to cook the same food in an oven.

This year's most popular episode so far focuses on portable heaters, with listener Ken wanting to know if the small ceramic heater he'd seen all over the internet was a scam. The short answer is no; it does indeed provide heat at a lower power, but there are serious safety concerns – which we covered thoroughly.

Both these episodes are on BBC Sounds and lots of people are sharing the episodes that resonate with them or that they think will be interesting for their friends or family: Shampoo. Running Shoes. Razors. And it's no wonder people are finding the podcast helpful right now. The term "cost of living crisis" is, perhaps, already being overused but behind that phrase are real people feeling a real financial squeeze. I've heard it in my chats with listeners, read it in the messages I receive on social media, and seen it in action with friends and family.

If spending more on branded batteries genuinely gives your gadgets more power for longer, then fantastic. If premium petrol is worth the extra cash to boost your mileage, then brilliant. But if you believe the hype, spend that extra money, and the wonder-product doesn't deliver, you're out of pocket. Maybe not by much, but it's by something, and that quickly adds up at a time when there is little breathing room in people's budgets.

And it's not just money. Suppose a listener wants to lower their impact on the planet and chooses a company that plants a tree for every product they sell, or someone decides to lease an electric car over a petrol or hybrid one. They want to know whether they're having a genuine eco-effect or just falling for green-washing. Sliced Bread is a place to come to find that out.

So, if you have seen something you'd like me to investigate, please do get in touch!

Greg Foot hosts Sliced Bread (Thursday 12.30pm Radio 4). All episodes available on BBC Sounds. Email your suggestions to: sliced.bread@bbc.co.uk or find Greg on Twitter/Instagram: @gregfoot

Opera on 3:
Shostakovich's Lady Macbeth of the Mtsensk

6.30pm Radio 3

A year after Russia's invasion of Ukraine, there are those who understandably still want to ban Russian music. But, having itself been banned in Soviet Russia, Shostakovich's savagely satirical yet ultimately tragic Lady Macbeth of the Mtsensk should perhaps always be an exception, if only as proof of the dangers of unfettered autocratic rule. First staged in 1934, the opera was a runaway success, chalking up an incredible 200 performances within its first two years, partly due no doubt to its riotous sex scenes. Then, one night, Stalin came to see it: the next day it was denounced in Pravda, all performances were cancelled and Shostakovich never wrote another opera. In tonight's Met broadcast, Russian soprano Svetlana Sozdateleva (above) sings the leading role of the murderous Katerina.

Dramatic Beats

8.00pm Radio 4

Michael Symmons Roberts's Danger 2023, a reboot of the world's first play for radio from 1924, was heard earlier this month. The poet-dramatist returns with a "love letter" to audio dramas, including those created down the years by playwrights so celebrated their last names suffice: Beckett, Stoppard, Orton, Pinter. We hear the voices of both the author and producer of that first play, and are brought up to date with news that modern sound effects are created digitally. Are people still listening to the "National Theatre of the Air"? About one million per day. London's Olivier theatre would have to be filled 870 times to match that. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Slow Radio: The Glacier in Retreat

11.30pm Radio 3
Through its Slow Radio programmes, Radio 3 has created an extraordinary body of work that draws the listener deep inside some compelling sound worlds. The effect on the brain of the strand's latest outing is almost hallucinogenic. We're in the realm of Arctic glaciers, where the microphones of recordists Ugo Nanni and Clovis Tisserand pick up something monumental – the groaning and cracking of vast swathes of ice as warming air does its worst, with weird overtones of other sounds like flocks of birds, and trains being shunted into sidings. It's a paradox that something so disturbing could also be so captivating. Is this the sound of the world ending? An astonishing half-hour that feels like something we should all have on repeat. SIMON O'HAGAN

Drama: Georges

3.00pm Radio 4
Rapper Testament already has form with drama, as writer of the 2018 stage play Black Men Walking. Now he has adapted Alexandre Dumas's lesser-known novel Georges, airing in two parts. As swashbuckling as The Count of Monte Cristo and The Three Musketeers, it differs from those two later books because in it Dumas, who was of mixed heritage and often taken for white, tackles slavery and racism. The brilliant Jamael Westman (former Hamilton star) plays both Georges of the title and Testament, who breaks into the action now and then to debate with Dumas (played by Peter Landi). FIONA HUGHES

Today's Choices

Drama: Maydays

2.15pm Radio 4

David Edgar updated his sprawling 1983 play about revolutionary politics in 2018, for the Corbyn era. Now he has reworked it again for radio where it seems very much at home. Maydays is a cautionary tale about the shift towards the right of Martin Glass (Mark Quartley, reprising his stage role, above), who progresses from student communist of the 60s to Thatcherite in the 1980s. Beginning with a news headline about the death of Hitler, breezy announcements tick off history's big events, as the first episode rattles through the years to the all-out miners' strike of 1972. In between, Glass debates political difference with his old schoolmaster (Geoffrey Streatfeild) and rallies the toiling masses. Add in a chipper soundtrack and it's all so much more fun than you might expect. FIONA HUGHES

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

Following Saturday's Opera on 3, there's more Shostakovich tonight from Hamburg's NDR Elbphilharmonie Orchestra under the BBC SO's chief conductor Sakari Oramo. Written in 1960, at a time when Lady Macbeth was still banned but the composer had finally been coerced into joining the Communist Party, Shostakovich referred to his darkly dramatic Eighth Quartet (played in Rudolf Barshai's orchestral expansion) as his musical obituary, peppering it with self-quotations and with his personal motto theme. By contrast, Prokofiev was still only in his 20s when he produced his typically mercurial First Violin Concerto, and the concert's transition from darkness to light is completed with Janacek's fanfare-framed Sinfonietta. MARK PAPPENHEIM

The Adventures of Tintin

6.00am/11.00am/4.00pm
Radio 4 Extra

Perhaps, like me, the Belgian boy detective has been part of your life since the BBC television series of the 1960s, re-voiced by the great Dalek interpreter Peter Hawkins. It's now 40 years since the death of Tintin creator Hergé, as good an excuse as any to revisit this splendid 1992 series, very faithful to the original stories. Today's, The Black Island (1937), is set in the UK and reaches its climax on the eponymous Scottish isle, reputedly guarded by a fearsome beast. The breathless action never lets up and Richard Pearce's voice couldn't be more perfect as Tintin's. No Captain Haddock, but he's in tomorrow's episode, The Secret of the Unicorn, voiced by the equally perfect Leo McKern.

DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

The Documentary: Flying Seagulls, Child's Play

9.30am/8.05pm World Service

On the surface, the Flying Seagull Project could be mistaken for any other carnival troupe booked to entertain kids on the UK festival circuit. But this eclectic band of clowns and performers are as likely to be found playing a juvenile prison in Poland or a refugee camp in Bulgaria as a field in Glastonbury. Georgia Moodie follows Flying Seagull founder Ash Perrin on his quest to bring fun and laughter to children from all walks of life. She also gets to grips with the importance of play and how just a few minutes of escapism can give parents a moment of respite. TOM GOULDING

Chris Harding leads a discussion prompted by new research into the impact of industrialisation – how sewing machines wrecked sewing, why people mistrusted tin cans, and links between the invention of stainless steel and the military. He's joined by academics Chris Corker (from the University of York), Lindsay Middleton (from the University of Glasgow) and Serena Dyer, who teaches at De Montfort University. Producer Tim Bano

10.45 The Essay: In Albania

2/5. Tirana. It's the mid-1990s, and Joanna

Robertson is settling in her new home, a crumbling flat in Albania's capital Tirana. The country is falling into crisis – miserably poor and with outbreaks of disease so bad the World Health Organisation feels compelled to intervene. There's plenty of material for Joanna to start filing her first news stories – from a bugged phone booth in a hotel, where the call has to be paid for in advance with a pile of painstakingly counted-out bank notes. (R)

Today's Choices

Free Thinking 10.00pm Radio 3

Can there be a more perfect example of soft power than the success of a Russian version of Sesame Street amid the maelstrom of the 1990s, when the country's "shock therapy" conversion to capitalism meant food shortages, lawlessness and political chaos? The wild story of the struggles to get Ulitsa Sezam on air expose tensions in post-Soviet Russia that are still being felt today. As producer Natasha Lance Rogoff (above, with one of the show's stars) tells Anne McElvoy, it was not a simple case of using the established format and changing the names. She had to adapt to the different puppet traditions of Russia, deal with the politics of a crew drawn from Russia and former Soviet Republics, and contend with the fact that the TV executives she worked with were liable to be assassinated. DAVID CRAWFORD

Radio 3 in Concert 7.30pm Radio 3

As Cate Blanchett's fictional conductor pontificates in one of the many musical truisms in Todd Field's preposterous maestro movie Tár, "Time is the thing." As if to prove her point, real-life French conductor Ludovic Morlot has themed tonight's BBC Philharmonic concert around the idea of time's passing. Framing Dutilleux's song-cycle Le temps l'horloge (Time/Clock), originally written for Renée Fleming, other musical time-pieces range from the accelerating locomotive of Honegger's Pacific 231 to the relentlessly repeated side-drum rhythm of Ravel's Bohème, via the late Harrison Birtwistle's classic 1970s "processional" The Triumph of Time, inspired by an allegorical Bruegel woodcut in which Death inevitably follows in Time's wake. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Today's Choices

The Forum

10.05am World Service

Rooted in traditional music, kitsch, rock and modernist poetry, the anti-authoritarian Tropicalia movement was a provocative and uniquely Brazilian aesthetic that emerged in the late 1960s. Its leading lights may have been arrested by the country's military regime and exiled to London, but its enduring legacy of artistic expression lives on. In this edition of The Forum, Rajan Datar and his guests contemplate what made Tropicalia so revolutionary. They discuss the interplay between music and words, as well as the surreal origin of many Tropicalia artists on talent shows similar to those that are broadcast today. The subversive music, which also caught the ire of Brazil's left-wing student movement for its ironic embrace of Americana, is performed here by singer Monica Vasconcelos and guitarist Gui Tavares. TOM GOULDING

Ramblings

3.00pm Radio 4

Sandwiched between the River Severn and River Wye, the Forest of Dean is one of the largest remaining ancient woodlands in the UK. Clare Balding quickly gets a sense of its ancient allure and independent spirit when she goes for a walk with the Canopy Arts group to write, draw and take photographs of their surroundings. Disembarking from Parkend station, Balding hears stories of encounters with wild boar, the area's mining heritage and the refuge that the club provided for local people during the height of Covid. Painting with feathers and rubbing gravestones, Balding tries to tap into what makes these "edgeland" inhabitants tick. TOM GOULDING

8/8. Make Germany Great Again

By Jonathan Myerson. Hitler becomes chancellor in January 1933, but what matters is that Hermann Goering is minister of the interior with 50,000 policemen at his disposal. They immediately crack down on all communists, placing their MPs into "protective custody" in a new camp near a Bavarian village called Dachau. When the Reichstag catches fire, Hitler decides this "Red Uprising" must be nipped in the bud. So begins the Nazi grip on Germany. All episodes are available on BBC Sounds.

Today's Choices

Homesick Planet

11.00am Radio 4

That's astronaut Tim Peake above, during his 185-day stint on the International Space Station back in 2016. He was about as far from home as you can get, the experience ideally qualifying him to consider the phenomenon that is homesickness. What does it mean to be so stricken with this longing for the place that is all about familiarity and security? No preview was available, but we're promised contributions from psychotherapist Sarah Temple-Smith, who works for the Refugee Council and believes homesickness is a widely misunderstood condition, its impact critically under-appreciated. There will also be stories of what people miss about home, and sound design that reflects those feelings. We've surely all experienced homesickness at some point, and we didn't need to head into space to do so. SIMON O'HAGAN

Lemn Sissay Is the One and Only

11.30am Radio 4

Thanks to an intriguing experiment that the poet Lemn Sissay carries out during this live performance, you may find that you'll never be able to hear the sound of applause in quite the same way again. It would be a spoiler to reveal where the experiment leads, but the moment encapsulates Sissay's singular take on the world. There are times when this celebration of uniqueness feels a bit too self-referential for its own good, with Sissay's friend and fellow poet Henry Normal on hand to extend the concept almost to breaking point. But in a way that's intentional, and Sissay comes up with some good jokes, a couple of clever poems and a neat interview. SIMON O'HAGAN

Love Bombed – the double life of a con man

A new BBC Sounds podcast brings a true-crime story to life

The true story of a conman who managed to live a double life for over two years is being told in a new nine-part podcast from BBC England.

An astonishing tale from across Tyneside and Teesside, Love Bombed with Vicky Pattison: How a serial cheater managed to hide his true identity investigates how a man calling himself James Scott maintained a lengthy relationship with a woman he met online – Coleen Greenwood – while secretly still living with his wife and three children.

The podcast follows TV personality Vicky Pattison as she heads home to north-east England to meet Coleen and hear how she, and everyone around her, was manipulated and deceived by the man they knew as James Scott.

Pattison also speaks at length to the con man's now ex-wife about how he managed to keep her in the dark while he was away with Coleen for days at a time.

"James" would eventually take tens of thousands of pounds from Coleen's sister, supposedly as investments in his various property businesses, and defraud multiple companies on Tyneside. He and Coleen even had a child together, despite

"James" claiming that he had had a vasectomy.

With exclusive access to police files, presenter Vicky Pattison seeks answers by speaking to numerous characters at the heart of this true-crime story. "It's that crazy," she says, "but it did happen and that's why I'm so fascinated."

The podcast's producer Jon Douglas says: "This fraud went on for years and the main motivation does not seem to have been money. It's only when you hear the lengths this man went to in order to create and maintain his illusion, that you can appreciate how so many perfectly intelligent people were taken in."

If you missed the serialisation on bbc.co.uk/radionewcastle and bbc.co.uk/radiotees you can catch up with all episodes of the podcast on bbc.co.uk/sounds

Love Bombed – the double life of a con man

A new BBC Sounds podcast brings a true-crime story to life

The true story of a conman who managed to live a double life for over two years is being told in a new nine-part podcast from BBC England.

An astonishing tale from across Tyneside and Teesside, Love Bombed with Vicky Pattison: How a serial cheater managed to hide his true identity investigates how a man calling himself James Scott maintained a lengthy relationship with a woman he met online – Coleen Greenwood – while secretly still living with his wife and three children.

The podcast follows TV personality Vicky Pattison as she heads home to north-east England to meet Coleen and hear how she, and everyone around her, was manipulated and deceived by the man they knew as James Scott.

Pattison also speaks at length to the con man's now ex-wife about how he managed to keep her in the dark while he was away with Coleen for days at a time.

"James" would eventually take tens of thousands of pounds from Coleen's sister, supposedly as investments in his various property businesses, and defraud multiple companies on Tyneside. He and Coleen even had a child together, despite

"James" claiming that he had had a vasectomy.

With exclusive access to police files, presenter Vicky Pattison seeks answers by speaking to numerous characters at the heart of this true-crime story. "It's that crazy," she says, "but it did happen and that's why I'm so fascinated."

The podcast's producer Jon Douglas says: "This fraud went on for years and the main motivation does not seem to have been money. It's only when you hear the lengths this man went to in order to create and maintain his illusion, that you can appreciate how so many perfectly intelligent people were taken in."

6.30 Stark Talk

Edi's guest is one of Scotland's busiest and popular musicians. With her cello she calls Stella, Su-a Lee is immediately recognisable with her trademark streak of crimson hair. A clue to her vibrant personality. She was born in South Korea and came to the UK when she was one and as she tells Edi, she was blessed by people who supported her musically. At the age of nine she gained a scholarship to the prestigious Chetham's music school in Manchester and went from there to study in New York and is now assistant principal cellist with Scottish Chamber. Scotland has always been a great love – and a place for healing. In a personal tribute, she climbed Ben Nevis in snow to play a lament in memory of her first husband who died shortly after they were married, but wonderfully, she has married again – to folk composer and musician Hamish Napier.
Repeated tomorrow 7am

7.00 Take the Floor

Gary Innes presents traditional music including a session from a leading band and a chat with special guests.
Email: takethefloor@bbc.co.uk

Love Bombed – the double life of a con man

A new BBC Sounds podcast brings a true-crime story to life

The true story of a conman who managed to live a double life for over two years is being told in a new nine-part podcast from BBC England.

An astonishing tale from across Tyneside and Teesside, Love Bombed with Vicky Pattison: How a serial cheater managed to hide his true identity investigates how a man calling himself James Scott maintained a lengthy relationship with a woman he met online – Coleen Greenwood – while secretly still living with his wife and three children.

The podcast follows TV personality Vicky Pattison as she heads home to north-east England to meet Coleen and hear how she, and everyone around her, was manipulated and deceived by the man they knew as James Scott.

Pattison also speaks at length to the con man's now ex-wife about how he managed to keep her in the dark while he was away with Coleen for days at a time.

"James" would eventually take tens of thousands of pounds from Coleen's sister, supposedly as investments in his various property businesses, and defraud multiple companies on Tyneside. He and Coleen even had a child together, despite

"James" claiming that he had had a vasectomy.

With exclusive access to police files, presenter Vicky Pattison seeks answers by speaking to numerous characters at the heart of this true-crime story. "It's that crazy," she says, "but it did happen and that's why I'm so fascinated."

The podcast's producer Jon Douglas says: "This fraud went on for years and the main motivation does not seem to have been money. It's only when you hear the lengths this man went to in order to create and maintain his illusion, that you can appreciate how so many perfectly intelligent people were taken in."

If you missed the serialisation on bbc.co.uk/radionewcastle and bbc.co.uk/radiotees you can catch up with all episodes of the podcast on bbc.co.uk/sounds

Love Bombed – the double life of a con man

A new BBC Sounds podcast brings a true-crime story to life

The true story of a conman who managed to live a double life for over two years is being told in a new nine-part podcast from BBC England.

An astonishing tale from across Tyneside and Teesside, Love Bombed with Vicky Pattison: How a serial cheater managed to hide his true identity investigates how a man calling himself James Scott maintained a lengthy relationship with a woman he met online – Coleen Greenwood – while secretly still living with his wife and three children.

The podcast follows TV personality Vicky Pattison as she heads home to north-east England to meet Coleen and hear how she, and everyone around her, was manipulated and deceived by the man they knew as James Scott.

Pattison also speaks at length to the con man's now ex-wife about how he managed to keep her in the dark while he was away with Coleen for days at a time.

"James" would eventually take tens of thousands of pounds from Coleen's sister, supposedly as investments in his various property businesses, and defraud multiple companies on Tyneside. He and Coleen even had a child together, despite

"James" claiming that he had had a vasectomy.

With exclusive access to police files, presenter Vicky Pattison seeks answers by speaking to numerous characters at the heart of this true-crime story. "It's that crazy," she says, "but it did happen and that's why I'm so fascinated."

The podcast's producer Jon Douglas says: "This fraud went on for years and the main motivation does not seem to have been money. It's only when you hear the lengths this man went to in order to create and maintain his illusion, that you can appreciate how so many perfectly intelligent people were taken in."

If you missed the serialisation on bbc.co.uk/radionewcastle and bbc.co.uk/radiotees you can catch up with all episodes of the podcast on bbc.co.uk/sounds

6.30 Tanni's Lifetime Road to Equality

1/3. Multi gold medal winning Paralympian Baroness Tanni Grey-Thompson looks back at the battle for rights and equality for disabled people across Wales and the rest of the UK. As a child growing up in Wales, the only other person Tanni saw in a wheelchair was a fictional character on the popular ITV soap of the day Crossroads. And in this series Tanni reflects on how things have changed for her and other disabled people over the past 50 years. Tanni chats to her sister about how her family originally coped with her disability in the early 1970s. She visits her old school where several teachers at a time would have to carry her around in a wheelchair to move her around the building and she hears from others who have been left frustrated as they navigate poor public transport facilities. She meets Simon Weston, who found himself thrust into the public eye after being injured during the Falklands War and she remembers how, against all the odds, she managed to take up sport as a teenager. Repeated tomorrow 5.30am

7.00 Huw Stephens Classic tracks, the Artist of the Week and new music from Wales and beyond.

'I LOOK ON THE BRIGHT SIDE'

Jon Snow may no longer be reading the news, but he still finds reasons to be optimistic about the world

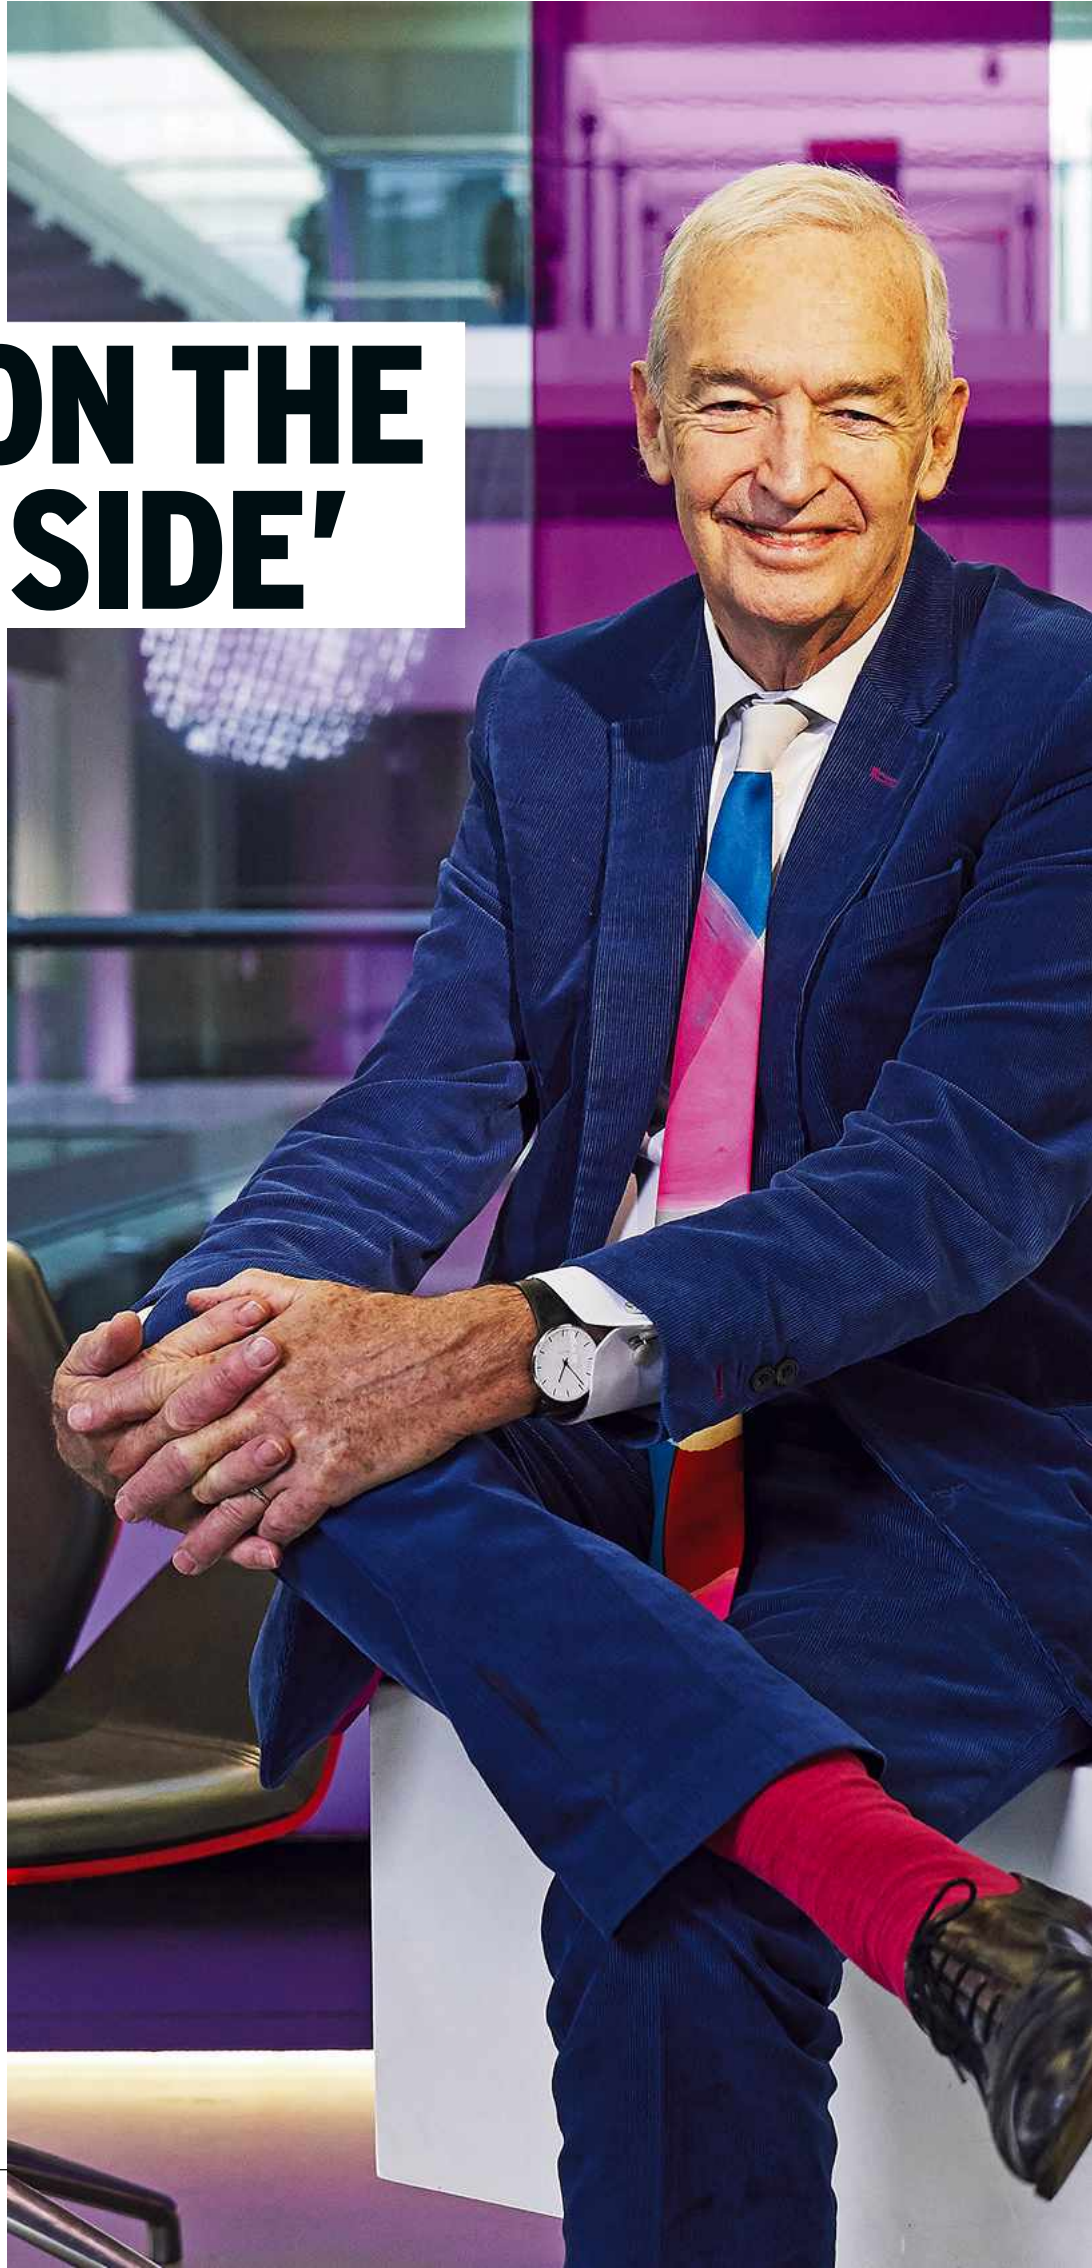

IT'S A HELL OF A RETIREMENT. JON SNOW stepped down from his role anchoring Channel 4 News in 2021, at the age of 74, but already this year he's presented a two-part documentary on C4 about ageing; launched Snowcast, his own weekly podcast; and is about to publish a thoughtful book, The State of Us, about news, society and inequality. Just for good measure, he's raising a toddler with his second wife, Dr Precious Lunga. So the first question when we meet is obvious: wouldn't he like a rest?

"No, thank you. Everything is tickety-boo except there isn't quite as much work as I'd like. I'm on the lookout for more." More? "Yes. You can't put your feet up anyway when you've got a two-year-old. They'll be sitting on your feet before you can put them even halfway up."

Ah, so the vast workload is really all about getting out of childcare duties? "No, not at all! That's very rewarding, too. It's just that I want to keep the old brain going. And you can't suddenly give up asking questions. You remain a journalist at heart, whether you're employed as one or not. I was at ITN and Channel 4 News for 43 years, and if you pound away for that long, doing the same thing, at the same time, every day, the moment it stops is quite abrupt."

Was it a little too abrupt? Was he pushed out? "I'd always known there would be an endpoint, and it was probably the right time," he replies. "I was well past 70 – or maybe not well past 70, but past 70 anyway." In fact, he adds, he was relieved to have got so far: "65 went by, and nobody said anything, so I breathed again."

There's no doubting the excitement in his voice when he talks about his new projects – although there's a little hesitancy, too. I'm not sure if it's modesty or memory playing up when I ask about Snowcast and he has no idea what I'm talking about. "Oh, I just haven't got used to calling them Snowcasts yet," he says airily. "But they're very stimulating because it's an opportu-

And the band played on...

A novel about the music biz that's eerily true to life

DAISY JONES & THE SIX TAYLOR JENKINS REID

Begins Friday Amazon Prime

When you start reading Daisy Jones and The Six (Arrow, £9.99), you could be forgiven for having to stop and double check that this isn't a story about a real band – Taylor Jenkins Reid's narrative style, done in the form of a long-form interview, brings her characters to life in such a way that you can easily second guess yourself. The novel charts the rise and fall of an American band in the 1970s, with all the sex and drugs that came with the era, exploring how quickly fame can be granted and how it can push you to your limits.

The drama is reviewed on page 32

A TOMB WITH A VIEW PETER ROSS

Book of the Week Mon–Fri 9.45am (FM), 12.30am Radio 4

Whether you find them spooky or sad, a peaceful place of remembrance or a simple resting place, it cannot be disputed that graveyards are filled with history and remarkable stories. But in writing about death, acclaimed writer Peter Ross has discovered that in fact, what A Tomb with a View (Headline, £20) is truly about is life, and more specifically, love. A sort of travelogue through cemeteries in Britain and Ireland, Ross entwines historical fact with human stories, offsetting the macabre with the care and humanity he brings to each tale, whether it's from an old medieval ossuary or a new age natural burial ground in Dorset.

STRONG FEMALE CHARACTER FERN BRADY

Autism is far less often diagnosed in women than in men, although not for a lack of cases. There are various theories, but often women are not diagnosed until adulthood – something comedian and TaskMaster contestant Fern Brady has experienced first-hand, and which she explores in her memoir Strong Female Character (Brazen, £16.99). Brady's wit is evident throughout, but she doesn't diminish her struggles with humour, assessing her work as a stripper, her sex life and her medical diagnosis with unflinching pragmatism. She paints a realistic portrait of masked autism that's sure to lift the veil on an underexplored area of neurodiversity. RHIANNON THOMAS

BIG DAY

Jon Snow in the scrum of reporters trying to talk to Margaret Thatcher after her general election victory in 1979

nity to do in-depth interviews with really interesting people from politics, acting, writing, whatever – a big contrast to news, where you do relatively superficial three-minute interviews.”

He's also relishing his new-found freedom from the necessity for neutrality. As a broadcast newsman, of course, he had to remain scrupulously apolitical: he rejected requests from MI5 to inform on fellow journalists (“I didn't sign up, whatever anyone thinks”), he rejected an OBE (“I don't think I could call myself ‘Sir’ without laughing”), and – despite being very tempted – he rejected a clear chance to shoot a sleeping Idi Amin on his private jet (“I should have shot him,” he said once, though today adds, “I wouldn't have survived such an event”). But now, at any rate, he's unleashed, and the new book – subtitled The Good News and the Bad News about Our Society – makes few bones about what Snow sees as the central issue of our time, inequality.

W EIGHTY THEN, BUT certainly not depressing. Indeed, Snow finds plenty of cause for hope: “Look at medical research, transport, climate – we may not yet have delivered what's needed on climate, but we now know enough to know that we have to do something. You have to look on the bright side.”

But can he do that when he looks at the state of our politics? As a man who's interviewed every British PM since James Callaghan, he surely can't think they've been getting better recently? “No. But their distance from the people has shrunk.” Who was his favourite to talk to? “I found Maggie Thatcher extremely rewarding. She was up for a fight. And, on occasions, a flirt.” (Theresa May, too? “No.”)

The one world leader that got away was Barack Obama (“I would love to have had quality time with him”), and the one Snow perhaps wishes had got away was Vladimir Putin: “I've never interviewed him, but I have been in his... presence,” he says. “There was something spooky about being in his presence. You felt you were being observed.”

So can he continue to look on the bright side, even when men such as Putin remain in power?

“I think there is constantly enough to be optimistic about. I mean, one must be optimistic to be the father of a two-year-old at the age of 75...” ED GRENBY

HIT THE ROAD

Paul Merton and Suki Webster aren't only the new faces of motorhoming – the viewing figures show they're bigger than Harry and Meghan...

Motorhoming with Merton and Webster

All episodes available now on My5

WE MIGHT BE IN TROUBLE if Harry and Meghan decide to make a show about motorhoming," muses Paul Merton, who has now fronted two series of his own travelogue on the subject. "But then again, maybe not. Episode two of our series went out the same night as Harry's ITV interview, and we didn't lose any viewers. So I'm not saying we're bigger than Prince Harry... but if Radio Times wants to say that, that's fine with me."

Although it might be a while before we see the Sussexes behind the wheel of a campervan, Merton and wife-cum-co-presenter Suki Webster have a few tips for them (and the rest of us) anyway...

Now that you've completed two series of Motorhoming, would you put your money where your mouth is and choose it for your own actual holidays?

SUKI We're not such converts that we'd go and spend 50 grand on our own motorhome, but we definitely want to rent one. It's a glorious way to holiday: you've got the beautiful English countryside, you can explore new towns and villages, you meet lovely people – it's like stepping back into the 1950s, with everybody chatting and playing frisbee together and it's perfectly acceptable to say, "Ooh, can I come in and see what kind of kitchen you've got?"

PAUL Yes, my only slight worry would be that among motorhomers, we're now very famous. Although, like Suki says, people are much more interested in the sort of kitchen your motorhome has than in, say, that time you met Roger Moore.

Motorhome sales have risen 22 per cent in the last year. Is that down to you guys?

PAUL Absolutely totally.

SUKI Do we get a 10 per cent commission?

PAUL I mean the pandemic probably helped, but our postman said that after watching the series, he bought one. Of course, if our milkman then said, "I saw your series and it put me off," I'd be reluctant to tell you that.

What have been your greatest motorhome holiday highlights?

SUKI The old gnomes' home in Devon was pretty memorable (gnomereserve.co.uk). It's a collection of 2,000 rescued garden gnomes, some of them dating back to the 19th Century. They've been restored, and we had a go at repainting a few so they presented us with Norman, a four-foot gnome who now lives in our garden. We said to our gardener, "Can you put him somewhere to surprise us?" So now he pops up behind a different bush each week.

PAUL Though as you'll see in the show, he does intrude on our private life. The other place I loved was the Cotswolds. We were in Jeremy Clarkson territory, but they don't boast about it as much as you'd think. There isn't a sign saying, "Welcome to Clarkson country! Leave your sensibilities behind..." We did some dry stone walling, which is like a vertical jigsaw with no guide. I thought I was doing quite well until the bloke teaching us kicked it over in disgust. He knew precisely the vulnerable point... which was all of it.

There seems to be a "diminishing" trend to your Channel 5 output, Paul. You did programmes on China, India, Europe and now motorhomes. What's next?

PAUL Britain's favourite sheds. Then a spin-off series on toolboxes. Then – fingers crossed on this – a show on what I've got under my floorboards.

SUKI What we're actually doing next is some improv shows on a special comedy-themed sailing trip round Scandinavia with the cruise line Princess [see right]. We've both always wanted to go to Denmark to see what they're all so happy about all the time.

PAUL Yeah, I like cruise ships, and I've always wanted to take that trip from Southampton to New York, but it always clashes with recording Have I Got News For You. I could do it the other way, I suppose, but what a disappointment it would be to leave New York and arrive in Southampton. It's the city that's so good they named it once.

You'll have a lot of competition for an audience on board. Julian Clary and Ed Byrne are also on the bill – and then there's the buffet...

PAUL If they're serving sausages, we might have a bit of bother.

SUKI If they're serving sausages, I'm not turning up to our gig. But luckily, Julian and Ed are playing different nights from us, otherwise it would be a real, um, sausage fight. Where whoever has the biggest chippolata wins.

PAUL I'm so glad that Julian's not in on this conversation because I don't think he'd be able to contain himself with those last two sentences, Suki. Anyway, it's going to be a great week – despite the competition from whatever hot food is being served.

MAKE YOUR MONEY WORK

With interest rates up again, your savings need to earn the most they can, advises Paul Lewis

INTEREST RATES ARE up again – which is good news for savers, though not so good for people with a mortgage or loan. The Bank of England has now raised the Bank Rate ten times in a row, increasing it from the negligible 0.1 per cent two years ago to the latest rate of 4 per cent. Some banks have joined the party and slightly raised the rates paid to savers. But it's more important than ever to make sure your savings for one to five years. The best pay around 4.3 per cent for a two-year fixed rate and only a fraction more for five years. That premium over instant access is worthwhile if you are saving long-term, or for a house deposit, for example.

NATIONAL SAVINGS

National Savings and Investments has issued its first one-year bond for many years. The Guaranteed Growth Bond pays 4 per cent. It is completely safe, and you can put in up to a million pounds (if you have that much), which makes it pretty much a best buy for the best-off.

Premium bonds have also improved slightly in the few weeks since I last wrote about them. From February they pay 3.15 per cent overall, though the actual rate taking into account just the prizes you are most likely to win – £25, £50, and £100 – is a shade over 2.5 per cent. But it is easy-access and prizes are tax-free. So if you pay tax and have used up your tax-free savings allowance, they are a best buy especially for higher-rate taxpayers and people who can afford to buy the maximum £50,000.

Rates change daily, so you can check the latest best buys at savingschampion.co.uk.

QUESTIONS? Send any questions to Paul.Lewis@radiotimes.com. I cannot answer you personally, but I will reflect them in this column.

'The best bonds pay around 4.3% for a two-year fixed rate' are earning the most they can: the average rate paid is less than half the "best buy" rates.

VARIABLE RATE

If you may need the money soon or at short notice then a variable-rate savings account can pay 3 per cent a year, though check the conditions as some penalise you for taking money out, or if the total left in falls below a threshold. You might get a smidge extra by agreeing to give notice – anything from 95 to 120 days before you want your money.

FIXED RATES

Fixed-rate bonds tie up your money

Amanda, Crisis frontline

More and more people are being pushed to the brink and into homelessness.

And as the cost of living crisis continues, the worst may still be to come – 300,000 households across Great Britain could be forced into homelessness in 2023.

It's simply unacceptable. But we won't give up. Right now, even in the most difficult situations, our teams on the ground help people find ways forward. And what's more, we're continuing to call for the policy changes that can end homelessness, for good and for everyone.

People like you make it happen. The ones who, like us, will never accept the unacceptable. When we come together, we'll always find a way – and right now, thousands need us to.

WHAT IS EQUITY RELEASE?

Unlock tax-free cash from your home to help you achieve your goals

If you're a homeowner aged 55 and over, you could unlock a lump-sum of tax-free cash from your home to enjoy spending once any existing mortgage has been repaid. It could be on a holiday, home improvements or providing a gift to a loved one.

HOW DOES EQUITY RELEASE WORK?

Equity release is a means of accessing a percentage of your property value while still living in your home. The money you release is tax free and can be taken as a lump sum or in smaller instalments. You can choose whether to make repayments, as the money that you release, plus the interest that you accrue, is repaid when you die or go into long-term care and your property is sold. Plus, some plans allow you to pay off a portion of the interest each month, meaning you can reduce the amount of debt that is being rolled up.

NO NEGATIVE EQUITY GUARANTEE

All equity release plans come with a no negative equity guarantee, which means that you can never pass on the debt to your estate, providing the property is sold for a reasonable amount. There are also plans that allow you to safeguard a percentage of your property value so that you can still pass on an inheritance to your loved ones.

GET ADVICE

We're pleased to be working with Age Partnership+, who are part of the UK's number one equity release adviser*, to offer an equity release service. Through our service, your dedicated adviser can provide you with a personalised illustration so you can understand the features and risks and find out how much you could release. They will help you understand if equity release could be right for you and they will tell you everything you need to know, including the effect on the amount of inheritance you can leave and if your entitlement to means-tested benefits could be affected now or in the future.

Your adviser will review a wide range of plans from the whole of the market to find the most suitable solution for your individual circumstances.

It's important to know that equity release may involve a home reversion plan or a lifetime mortgage, which is secured against your property. Your quotation is free and you are under no obligation to proceed. Only if you choose to proceed and your case completes would a fee of £1,995 be payable.

Word of the week Eavesdrop

Long before guttering, roofs were traditionally built with wide overhangs to direct rainwater away from buildings. The "yfesdrype", as it was known in Old English, was the ground onto which the rain from those eaves would fall. A law prohibited house owners from building at a distance of less than two feet from the boundary of their land in order to avoid problems caused by "eavesdrip" – water falling from the eaves on to their neighbour's land. The overhang also provided cover for anyone wishing to lurk beneath it and tune into their neighbour's conversations in the hope of picking up secrets.

Standing under the eavesdrip, or the eavesdrop as it was later called, therefore provided the perfect venue for picking up gossip.

...What a fantastic, emotional, informative programme this was – well done, Chris Packham, for being totally honest about autism. This programme was so helpful to so many people and I would ask for it to be shown again at prime viewing time on BBC1.

Heather Sims

Corfe Mullen, Dorset

...What a powerful and moving programme. Being a parent of an autistic daughter with other challenging diagnoses, I was moved to tears by the programme, and constantly had to keep pulling myself together.

For too long my wife and I have been advocating that everybody should have a voice, that their opinion should be heard. Human beings should not look at people and “judge a book by its cover”. These programmes should be mandatory viewing.

RIGHT TO BE SCARED

Chris Packham says, “I am angry and I’m scared”, that we’re banging our heads against a brick wall in the climate crisis “and the wall isn’t shifting” (RT, 11 February). The brick wall is ourselves as we insist that people come first and all else must be subordinated to us.

The world is already overpopulated and yet the population increases. Vast swathes of the globe have been concreted over, forests razed for profit, seas polluted and rivers made toxic as we pour our sewage into them.

Wildlife is increasingly limited to smaller areas, which are filled by more buildings. Other species continually become extinct. And still we cling to our lifestyle despite the obvious signs that it is under severe threat. Our response to climate change should be the overwhelming priority. Yet our Government shows minimal interest and makes only token moves to confront the challenge. We cling to the comforting fantasy that we can continue as before. Chris is right to be angry and scared. More of us need to share his feelings and to insist the Government acts on them.

FRY’S FAB FINDINGS

I just love listening to Stephen Fry (left), he is so passionate about everything he gets involved in, and

Dinosaur with Stephen Fry (Sunday Channel 5) was no exception. The graphics were amazing, and very realistic.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Speaking out about autism

What a superb programme Inside our Autistic Minds was (14 February BBC2), with the presenter Chris Packham, who himself has autism. I could not get over the great testimony from Flo, who had “masked” her feelings all her life, just to fit in. She wanted to reach out to her mum with a film that showed her real self with all her myriad discomforts, and this proved so successful.

Murray Bruce, Ken Bruce’s son, does not speak but has an interior world that was breathtaking. Again his film, with an actor speaking his words, was so empathetic, brave and articulate. This was outstanding television and places men, women and children with autism in the centre of the room and not languishing, unheard, on the edges.

Sleek and practical, this DAB/DAB+/FM radio has pre-sets for up to 20 stations, both a radio and a buzzer alarm with snooze function and an audio fade-out setting for listening in bed. The display light can be adjusted to dim or black-out at night. The Ortus 2 also features a USB socket for a smartphone connection and can double up as a speaker for your iPod or MP3 player. With the two experts explaining the most recent discoveries, it was a great insight to hear about new findings of fossils. If ever we need a new narrator when David Attenborough finally hangs up his coat, then it must be the wonderful Mr Fry.

A TONIC FOR OUR TIMES

I would just like to say what a great tonic it was to start watching the new series Funny Woman (Thu Sky Max). The 1960s vibe and setting enticed me from the very start and I’m thoroughly enjoying Gemma Arterton’s performance in particular as the endearing and “funny” Sophie Straw. What a joy to watch something so entertaining and uplifting in these recent miserable times.

HITCH A RIDE

I have recently discovered Alfred Hitchcock Presents on the Talking Pictures channel. It really is a wonderful series, with a minimal cast, sometimes including only three people, but the storylines are gripping and always contain a twist that is revealed right at the end. This is perfect viewing before going to bed.

Sue Cawte Ilford, Essex

ROSE THE REMARKABLE

At last, on 12 February on Channel 4, the rarely seen Rose Schmits of The Great Pottery Throw Down was finally allowed to appear for more than just one fleeting moment.

It is Rose, of course, who plays such an invaluable, if mainly unseen, part of the programme. As well as treading up and down the outdoor stairs carrying heavy trays of precious pottery she takes charge of the drying room, the firing, filling and emptying of the kilns, and goodness knows what else behind the scenes. Please let us see and hear more of Rose!

GREAT ESCAPE

My husband and I had many wonderful holidays in beautiful Northumberland. Alas, due to physical limitations we can no longer enjoy its beauty, but Robson Green's Weekend Escapes (BBC2) have given us both such delight!

Liz Woolley

Brackley, Northamptonshire

...I just wanted to say how much I enjoyed the Robson Green programmes. I have only visited Durham – which I loved. Watching his programmes, I realise how much I have missed in Yorkshire, Northumberland etc. The countryside and beaches look beautiful.

Conversations from a Long Marriage (Radio 4) for the third time: I thought it was only me who loved the amazing Joanna Lumley and Roger Allam (inset, right) so much that each story is worth listening to multiple times.

Even when I know what's coming I still laugh out loud!

My second "thank you" is for the lovely "Perfect Partners" article about the series. It was so lovely to see a picture of the brilliant Jan Etherington and read the great news that series four of Conversations has begun, and that Jan has been commissioned to write a fifth series.

UNMISSABLE ARCHERS

I really would like to show my appreciation for The Archers. The acting is impeccable...

The wonderful cast have no visual props, only sound effects and whatever they deliver vocally.

I started to listen to it about seven years ago and I must admit that I didn't take it seriously, but it has drawn me into its clutches. One minute you can be laughing, then without any warning you can be reduced to tears.

NOLLY GOOD SHOW

Thank you so much to Jane Garvey for her wonderful article on Crossroads (RT, 11 February), and for her appreciation of the new Russell T Davies series Nolly. It's about time that both Crossroads and Noele Gordon got the appreciation they deserve.

They, along with all the cast, did a wonderful job in entertaining us over all those years on ITV and it remains to this day one of my all-time favourite programmes.

POINTS DEDUCTED

What on earth has happened to Counterpoint (Monday Radio 4)? Why are there now so few questions on classical music? I used to look forward to this quiz for its varied questions, most of which were based on classical music or popular musicals with a few pop songs thrown in.

Counterpoint has become another Pop Master and now belongs on Radio 2. Please reinstate its original formula!

COMING FULL CIRCLE

Did anyone else notice how the storyline in the last episode of the excellent Happy Valley (BBC1) came full circle with the opening of the first episode of series one? It starts with Catherine Cawood attending an incident with a young man doused in petrol, threatening to set fire to himself. Maybe a coincidence, but I think not.

BEHIND THE SCENES

Bringing Noele "Nolly" Gordon back to the telly

Annie Hardinge, who was a huge fan of Crossroads as a child, is the costume designer for the ITVX drama Nolly, which tells the story of the soap's matriarch Noele Gordon, played by Helena Bonham Carter. Hardinge worked closely with the latter to craft Gordon's distinctive looks: "Helena gave me her slant on how she wanted to play Nolly and I took that on board when creating her looks.

"Nolly was a larger-than-life personality and Helena and I wanted this to be reflected in her flamboyant personal style. We kept using the word 'swishy' to describe her – silk dresses in bold prints that moved when she made her entrance.

"She was a very elegant woman and always looked very well put together. It was also interesting to dress Nolly 'down' for the scenes at her home where she was alone and rather sad... without her audience."

The research process took weeks to land Gordon's on- and off-screen style. It involved rewatching old episodes of Crossroads and televised interviews, reading books about the series from the 1970s and 80s, and finding photographic references for all the Crossroads characters, as well as the actors. After breaking down the scripts, Hardinge created a "look-book" (right) of reference photos and drawings for Nolly and all the main characters, which was especially helpful when differentiating Nolly from her Crossroads character Meg Richardson (later Mortimer). "Nolly's wardrobe was more flamboyant and theatrical, and Meg's outfits were much simpler

MEG, A STAR
Crossroads actor Noele Gordon in 1978, and as played in Nolly, left, by Helena Bonham Carter and more controlled, as befits the owner of the Crossroads Motel."

Bonham Carter attended lots of fittings, as most of Nolly's costumes were designed from scratch, while Hardinge additionally sourced some vintage pieces online, and also hired a few. She was responsible for re-creating the wedding attire of Meg and Hugh Mortimer (John Bentley), where Gordon wore a "beautiful duck-egg blue voile dress and matching picture hat", and her return to Crossroads in her on-screen daughter's Venice honeymoon, where she wore "a cream silk voile dress and veil", and Nolly's theatrical outfits for Gypsy, as well as her dancers and the backstage crew.

Hardinge adds, "We wanted to put our spin on how she looked rather than just copy photographs. Helena and I wanted to elevate Nolly's look, but still make her look believable."

LAURA RUTKOWSKI

Nolly is on ITVX, and will air on ITV1 later this year

The delicate snowdrop is the earliest and bravest of all flowering spring bulbs – with its tiny white petals and green-tinged centres, it bursts into bloom when the weather is at its worst. With the rest of your garden dormant, this cheery, fresh-faced fellow brightens the gloomiest looking space.

Notoriously difficult to grow from the dry bulbs found in garden centres, the best way to ensure success is to plant snowdrops while they are still in leaf – otherwise known as "in the green". The soil surrounding the bulbs contains a special fungus that encourages a strong and vigorous new root system. By planting in this way you can look forward to a stunning display in your garden from the very first season... and for years to come!

GLAMOROUS GLADIOLI – 100 bulbs £9.99 plus p&p***

DAME EMMA THOMPSON

The Hollywood star on her big TV break – and why the Oscars made her sick

You divide your time between north-west London and Scotland – which living room do you prefer?

Oh, God – they're different! Our living room in London is our kitchen as well – everything happens in there. In Scotland, you eat in the kitchen and then sit in front of the fire releasing whatever needs to be released – ideas, wind, windy ideas...

What have you been watching on telly?

Happy Valley gave me such pleasure. It was so brilliantly written and beautifully performed – just fantastic.

Who controls the remote?

Neither of us [Emma and her husband Greg Wise] has any kind of relationship with the remote. Both of us spend the entire time wandering around, clapping our hands to the carpet, going, "Where's the remote?" We're both utterly pathetic.

Which TV shows have marked your life?

Monty Python's Flying Circus got me through school. I wrote to Michael Palin about it when I was in my 30s and he, and the others, sent me a bill. It was essential through my teenage years – school, on some level, is deeply unbearable for all young people because it's so rigid and Victorian.

When did you know you wanted to act?

When I was 16, I saw Racine's Andromaque. It was brilliant. I watched it so many times. All the actors took their clothes off at one point and were all just gorgeous – that had something to do with it... I wrote to my father [actor Eric Thompson] saying, "I'm going to have to do something in this field." When I got to Cambridge, I wanted to write. I'd seen Lily Tomlin in an extraordinary piece called Signs of Intelligent Life in the Universe. All these incredible female comedians expanded the idea of "the female" for me. I was going to be a comedian until I was at least 27, which is when I first acted.

LISTEN TO THE FULL INTERVIEW WITH EMMA THOMPSON

Search RADIO TIMES PODCAST on your podcast provider. Find out more about our podcasts on radiotimes.com/podcasts

Being in Cambridge Footlights with Stephen Fry and Hugh Laurie in the early 80s must have been formative...

Stephen and Hugh were remarkable. Those times were magical. We did it for fun – we weren't waiting for people to come and see the show and pick us up.

Did you have any doubt that you would be able to make a career out of acting?

I had no ambition of wanting to be a movie star. It didn't occur to me. The first acting I did on telly was Tutti Frutti [1987] with Robbie Coltrane. I got that by accident because they needed a woman who could do a Scottish accent and Robbie said, "Ask Thompson."

Has fame been difficult to grapple with?

Both times I had to do the Oscars I got seriously ill. I found the pressure and glare of it too much. It's astonishing – and then afterwards you want to lie down in a dark room. You think, "Please don't ask me any questions or make me talk about myself." I quickly developed a sort of allergy to that part of the job. I'm lucky – I think it must be awful if you're James Bond.

MY LIFE IN TV

FIRST TV MEMORY
Watching Z Cars on our black-and-white telly. My dad got pushed off a roof in one episode. I was traumatised by that.

COMFORT TV
I love Tony Hopkins like a sort of father. I'd go for something comforting that he's in.

Tell us about Cath, the character you play in your most recent film, What's Love Got to Do with It?

She's so inappropriate! She's got absolute cloth ears. She's the sort of person who'll say, "The nice thing about a burka is it's just wonderfully forgiving, isn't it!" And you just groan. But I find myself saying something and my daughter will say, "Mum, you actually can't say that." Cath represents all of us as we get older, because we're always saying the wrong thing or doing the wrong thing.

What has this film taught you about love, companionship and marriage?

It's philosophically helpful and uplifting to remember that romantic love is a myth and quite dangerous. We really do have to take it with a massive pinch of salt. To think sensibly about love and the way it can grow is essential. Long-term relationships are hugely difficult and complicated! If anyone thinks that happy ever after has a place in our lives, forget it! KELLY-ANNE TAYLOR

All around the world

If the travel bug has gripped you once again, here are a dozen destinations to make your wildest dreams come true

The world has had its wings clipped in recent times, with travel largely limited to weekends in Britain, before slowly getting back into the swing with a European-weekend fling. But things are really opening up again in 2023 – so get set to jet off. Life, we've all learnt, is too short to give up on dreams. Read on and make a travel date with one (or more!) of the 12 most exciting places to explore on Earth... ED GRENBY RT TRAVEL EDITOR

1 PYRAMID SELLING

Trips of a lifetime don't always take an eternity to reach: the land of the pharaohs is a five-hour flight from the UK. There's a holiday to suit everyone, be it ancient history or scuba diving and lounge lazing – for which, look no further than Hurghada and Sharm El-Sheikh on the Red Sea. Or fly to Cairo, where the Pyramids rise mythically on the hazy horizon – take in a Sound and Light show after dark to complete the exhilaration, as colourful beams play over the inscrutable Sphinx.

Nile cruises that can last from two days to a week or more hold enduring appeal, as you drift past desert-and-palm landscapes between Luxor and Aswan, visiting extraordinary temples like Sobek and Karnak between leisurely breakfasts and afternoon tea on deck. Fewer tourists head to Alexandria, on the Med, but it's a fascinating city, founded by Alexander the Great, and its Art Deco heyday is faintly visible in its waterfront hotels, faded by sea breezes.

2 CARIBBEAN QUEEN

Nothing compares to the thrill of leaving winter Britain and, nine hours later, making the final descent over sea coves and glossy palm trees to Grantley Adams International Airport. Hit the hotel, unpack your swimsuit... you've arrived in Barbados. The island has long been a byword for holiday heaven – if you can stretch to a week on the west (aka "platinum") coast you'll understand why. The sands are soft, the swell gentle and the hotels world-class: among them Coral Reef Club, Cobblers Cove and the world-famous Sandy Lane. On a budget? The south coast – ie Dover Beach, Accra Beach – has affordable apartments and B&Bs. Fancy something wilder? The east coast is surf-bashed and authentic, with local fish-fry joints and tiny settlements. Hire a car to explore local parishes, with picturesque churches set against horizons of sugar cane.

12 Top trips FOR GLOBAL TRAVELLERS

3 ANIMAL MAGIC

Early drives in the clear, cold dawn; leisurely lunches with infinity-pool dips against parched plains; a pitch-black night outing under skies sparkling with constellations. A bucket-list safari is about wildlife, sure, but an experience this rarefied brings with it much more. The diverse nations of Africa present myriad landscapes, from the vast tawny expanses of Tanzania's Serengeti, to the miombo woodland and flood plains of Zambia, where the Lower Zambezi National Park is red in tooth and claw.

Depending on what you pay and where you visit, a safari could mean a luxury lodge with gourmet meals, clawfoot tubs and sunset cocktails overlooking bathing elephants (try Botswana's Chobe National Park); or camping in Rwanda, home to the misty Virunga peaks and more than half of the world's mountain gorillas. Best of all, you'll take home memories of dedicated, warm, welcoming local staff – encounters that are crucial to a connected modern planet. To whet your appetite, check out journeysbydesign.com, coxandkings.co.uk and wildernessdestinations.com.

4 BORNEO TO BE WILD

It's legendarily inaccessible, but in reality Borneo – part Malaysian, part Indonesian, with a dash of Brunei – is so do-able you can book an adventure there with the likes of Saga (holiday.saga.co.uk), Kuoni (kuoni.co.uk) and Trailfinders (trailfinders.com). Naturally, getting up close with a resident wild orangutan is the main attraction. Or head for the Kinabatangan river on the Malaysian side for some of the best wildlife sightings on a cruise among its tributaries: at dawn the jungle echoes with howls and screeches as macaques and proboscis monkeys awake to search for food. Indonesian Borneo is a more challenging prospect, but specialists such as Intrepid (intrepidtravel.com) can get you there, staying in longhouses and eco-lodges and meeting and eating with the locals.

GOING APE

5 SINGAPORE FLING

Food, glorious food – that's why many visit the "Lion City". Head for one of Singapore's frenetic food courts: favourites include Adam Road Food Centre, near the Botanical Gardens, and Maxwell Food Centre, in Chinatown. First, though, sightseeing. Gardens by the Bay is a forest of tree-sculpture towers lit at night and linked by walkways, or try a nocturnal safari at the Mandai Wildlife Reserve. Should rain stop play, there's Singapore National Gallery. The city's bar scene is terrific, too, with curiosities of every stripe – start at the cavernous Atlas, and base your city crawl on recommendations gleaned there. Crucial tip: sip a Singapore Sling in the Long Bar in the elegant Raffles hotel, where throwing your monkey-nut shells on the floor is a lively ritual.

6 A PASSAGE TO INDIA

The country is so diverse culturally and so varied geographically, you could spend 12 months travelling around and still not see everything. From the icy Himalayas of far-northern Ladakh to the temples of southernmost Tamil Nadu with their carved technicolor façades, India's spectrum of experiences is vast. Not able to devote that long? Not a problem. Two weeks is sufficient for an unforgettable adventure. You could cover the Golden Triangle comfortably in seven days, including Delhi, the Taj Mahal at Agra, and Jaipur, with its gemstone bazaars. In a fortnight you might see the mountainous north, taking the tiny "toy train" railway to the Raj-era hill station of Shimla; admire Buddhist monasteries on the journey to Kargil, the halfway point to Kashmir; and relax into a houseboat on serene Dal Lake in Srinagar. Where to start planning? With an expert. Try abercrombiekent.co.uk for insider inspiration.

7 SPIRITUAL MOMENTS

As ancient and biblically holy as it may sound, Israel's spiritual epicentre Jerusalem is also a vibrant modern metropolis. It is conservative in comparison with up-all-hours Tel Aviv, but its streets of golden masonry are home to boutique hotels and fashionable restaurants, so it merits more than just a day trip. (A wander along lively Emek Refaim Street will persuade you.) One of the world's oldest cities, it is a place of extraordinary sights. In the Old City, join an organised tour to see the walled Temple Mount compound, home to the gilded Islamic Dome of the Rock and Al Aqsa Mosque. Contemplate the Western Wall, for Jewish people one of the most important sites in the world, and enter the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, in the Christian Quarter, which contains the tomb of Jesus.

8 GORGEOUS GEORGIA

Bordering Azerbaijan to the east and the Black Sea to the west, the Republic of Georgia is a find. Aim for a fortnight to appreciate its full majesty: lakes, national parks, vineyards, mountains and monasteries (among the finest is early-medieval Jvari, in the old capital Mtskheta). Begin with the current capital, Tbilisi, where cobbled streets in the old town abut the modern city's avenues of great late-night bars. At the other extreme is northern Kazbegi, a land of snow-white summits, sweeping emerald pastures and frothing meltwater streams. Base yourself in the town of Stepantsminda, where Gergeti Trinity Church perches 2,200m above sea level. You can reach it in a couple of hours on foot if you're fit. Visit, too, the eastern town of Gori, birthplace of Stalin. A museum displays his boots and desk, while you can clamber aboard his bulletproof train carriage in the grounds.

9 LIVING THE THAI LIFE

Few countries blend energy and serenity like Thailand. Sleepy temples are at home amid big-city traffic, modern malls jostle with old markets, while party scenes and quiet beaches coexist harmoniously on islands. Allow three days for the sights of Bangkok: the Grand Palace, where patient masses file past the tiny Emerald Buddha; Wat Pho, where the deity, now gold and reclining, assumes dwarfing dimensions; and Chao Phraya river, cruising by waterborne vendors at work. Next stop: Chiang Mai, Thailand's northern metropolis, for a few days of cooking classes, white-water rafting and getting up close with docile elephants. A plane will take you south to Krabi island for superb snorkelling. Once here, you can ferry-hop: to Koh Lanta for Thai-Muslim and Chinese culture, Koh Phi Phi for lurid sunsets and potent cocktails, then the sun and sands of Phuket for heavenly food.

10 SOUK IT AND SEE

Among the countries of North Africa, Tunisia stands out for its excellent tourist infrastructure, catering for whatever you fancy: city weekend, sunshine fortnight or desert-dune fantasy. Best known for well-priced package holidays, Tunisia has an absorbing, underrated capital, Tunis – and the country has been attracting visitors for millennia, as the archaeological site of Carthage proves. Founded in the ninth century BC and once the hub of a vast trading empire, it's still magnetic today – and you can even get there by metro (alight at Carthage Hannibal). Spend a couple of days in Tunis, souk-shopping. After that, hit the beach. For sandy stretches, lined with resorts, try Skanes, Sousse, Hammamet and Monastir (search tui.co.uk, easyjet.com and onthebeach.co.uk). Saharan adventures begin near Tozeur: take an overnight camel trek and catch a fiery dawn.

11 MOUNTAIN EXCITEMENT

Visit Canada and you will be rewarded with endless natural spectacle. From around the third week of September into October is peak Fall season, a fiery display of foliage in key areas including the Laurentian Mountains of southern Quebec. In spring the days grow long and pale. After hibernation (December–April), bears lope about with cubs, and whales pursue herring shoals. Summer brings foxes and caribou to the Manitoba tundra, with polar bears on the prowl behind them. Canada's great outdoors is an activity-seeker's playground: the peaks and flanks of the Rockies, and the thermal springs in Banff National Park, are a kayaker's delight in summer and heaven in winter for skiers and boarders. City-lover? Quebec City oozes French flavours and majors in luxury hotels – or there's Toronto, with a lively dining scene and masses of galleries and theatres.

12 USA OK!

Electric cities, exhilarating wilderness, thrilling theme parks, animal encounters – the USA is a lifetime of holidays wrapped up in one convenient country. Airlines are unveiling new destinations – Virgin Atlantic recently introduced a route to music city Austin, Texas, while this summer BA is starting flights to Cincinnati, Ohio, with its music halls and museums. But the classics survive: a long weekend in New York, say, lunching by the boating lake in Central Park and living it up in the Lower East Side after dark; or San Francisco, ever-atmospheric, liberal and laced in fog. Spend time looking online – americaasyoulikeit.com are masters in vacation solutions. How about a motorhome holiday through the Grand Canyon, a railway adventure or a small ship cruise? Did we say a lifetime? In America, you'll wish you had longer. NICK REDMAN
